Car Theft

The Fate of a Black Saab Parked in the Back of Dan's Papers

By Dan Rattiner

At ten after five on Monday afternoon, our delivery manager here at Dan's Papers, Tom Swinimer, poked his head through my office door. I was just packing up to leave for the day.

"Somebody stole a car from the back lot," he said. He named the person it belonged to, an employee at the paper who shall remain nameless. "She went out and it is not where she parked it."

I got up.

"Somebody STOLE a car? Has she called the police?" I asked.

"I don't know."

"Is she SURE it's stolen?"

"She's sure."

I went outside. A lot of people were outside. Maybe half the people working at Dan's Papers.

"This has never, EVER happened before," I said to the crowd. "We've been here thirty five years. NOBODY steals cars here. Where was it parked?"

Somebody pointed to a spot that didn't have a car in it. This was not technically in the back lot of Dan's Papers. It was over the property line in the back lot of our neighbor, Urban Archeology. We frequently park there.

I had a fleeting thought. The insurance claim would be against the neighbor's property, not mine. I banished the thought for the moment.

There were a lot of people standing around that spot. Like something happened in that spot. A meteor had landed there, perhaps. I walked over. And I stood standing around the spot, too.

"What kind of car was it?" I asked.

"A Saab," somebody said. "Brand new. Black."

PATAKI SIGNS BUDGET, COLLEGE IS APPROVED

By Dan Rattiner

On Tuesday night, Governor Pataki approved a State budget for 2006 that includes $30 million for the purchase of the old Southampton College campus in Shinnecock from Long Island University, and $5 million for construction and renovation of the premises. Southampton is going to get its college back. And this time, it will be in the financially strong hands of the State University system. The doors should open with undergraduate programs in the environment, fine arts and marine science in September 2006.

"There still could be a skunk in the woodpile," said Senator LaValle, whose Education Committee shepherded the money through the legislature to the Governor's desk. "Long Island University could still come up with some crazy number for the price of the land rather than what has been discussed, but we think $30 million is what it will go for."

The net result of all of this will be a pretty dark college grounds during the school year of 2005-6, as buildings are being brought back up to snuff. A graduate program in the Marine Sciences will continue in buildings on Shinnecock Bay off the main campus. And there will be some undergraduate classes still going on. Chancellor Hall will remain open as will several other buildings. Then, next September, there will be the arrival of SUNY Stony Brook, Southampton Campus. We can hardly wait.

We think you should choose your mortgage the same way you choose your new house.

As one of the country's largest and best savings banks, Hudson City Savings understands that buying a new home is one of the most important investments you'll ever make. We've lent billions of dollars for mortgages in New Jersey since 1868 and know from experience it's important to shop for your financing as carefully as you do for your home.

That's why we offer a variety of mortgage and refinancing plans with the most competitive rates on Long Island.

We also provide quick approval - less than 48 hours in most cases - and unlike many banks do not "sell" our mortgages to another institution. Your relationship is with Hudson City Savings Bank for the entire term of your mortgage.

Find out why New Jersey's best savings bank is about to become one of Long Island's. Call Mortgage Advisors (South Fork) John Gaudin at (516) 443-0552 or (North Fork) Kelly Bruer at (631) 457-0966 for more details.

I imagined a brand new, shiny black Saab. There certainly wasn't one there, that was for sure. But I kept looking. Maybe there was a footprint, or a gas cap or something, some evidence. But there was nothing.

"We have PERMISSION to park in this lot," somebody said.

"We certainly do," I said.

When Lou Meisel, who owns the lot next door, made his application to build the Urban Archeology building, the whole business of parking came up at Town Hall. The town required, in order for the project to go ahead, that there be an agreement between him and me that we break through between our properties, so we could use his lot and he could use our lot. The town also required me to agree that if the store on the other side, Bridgehampton Country Market, ever expanded their business, I would agree to connect my lot to theirs. I thought all this was fine and signed it. It wouldn't make any more cars, after all. And a bigger lot was better than a small one.

I went over to Urban Archeology. Maybe they had seen something. But it was after five and the store was closed.

Leslie Ernst, our Sales Director, then walked back to Dan's Papers with me.

Where the Saab was

"Maybe the car got towed away," Leslie said.

"There was a tow truck out front for quite awhile. A lot of people saw the flashing lights."

"I don't think Urban Archeology would do that," I said.

"Maybe the manager just went nuts. Maybe the car was parked where it shouldn't have. Sideways or something."

"Hmmm."

The owner of the Saab was sitting her computer in the production room, looking sad.

"I heard about your car," I said. "I'm sorry."

"My dad gave it to me as a college graduation present," she said.

I didn't know WHAT to say to that. "Well," I finally said, "It must be insured. And maybe there is some other explanation for all of this. Nobody has EVER stolen a car from our lot before."

It occurred to me after I said it that maybe that hadn't been helpful. I mean, so —you're the first. Well, at least I didn't tell her that almost the whole time we've been here, we've just left the keys to the delivery vans in the ignitions all the time. That way we know where they were. Nobody ever stole a van.

"Have the police come?" I asked.

"They're on their way, I think."

"Do you need a ride anywhere?"

"No."

"Well, I know this is a shock to you and I am sorry it happened. I really am."

I left the production room and headed up front. People were still walking around outside. Or talking about it inside.

"Didn't anybody see anything?" someone was asking.

Leslie was still with me.

"Here's another thought," I said. "Maybe her father's having some financial problem and the car was repossessed."

"That would account for the tow truck."

"They have those repo men on TV," I said.

By Dan Rattiner

A friend from Cincinnati was visiting us. And she flipped through the pages of Dan's Papers. The real estate section.

"Well, this doesn't seem quite right," she said. "Five bedrooms, four baths on three acres. Walk to the ocean. $150,000. Oh. Wait a minute. That's to RENT."

She pressed on.

"Here's a house. Rent it for July for $40,000. Rent for August for $60,000. Why is August more than July?"

I had no answer for that.

So I have looked into it. Turns out that, barring extenuating circumstances, renting for July, which often includes Memorial Day Weekend and the month of June, does cost less than August, which usually includes Labor Day weekend through about September 10.

It certainly isn't because of the number of holidays. You get two big holidays in the "July" rental. And just one big holiday in the August rental. And it certainly isn't because you get more days in your rental in August because in fact, it's the other way around. There are 71 days in the July rental and just 41 days in the August rental, as I have it configured.

Perhaps it's the psychiatrists. Psychiatrists typically take the month of August off (which accounts for the often bizarre behavior of the populace they have abandoned during that month). They come out to the Hamptons. And their desperate patients come out too, fearing the worst if they don't.

Perhaps it's the social season. If you come out in June and July, there are a few social events to go to, but for the most part you get roped into the planning of the August social events. Think about it. The summer people are very busy in the city for most of the year. Summer is coming. And they have an event to plan, and if it is in June or July, they are forced to do all the planning for it in April and May in Manhattan. But if the event is planned for August, they've put it off. So they go into rush mode when they get out to the Hamptons in late May and June and they just rope as many people as possible

NEW YORK COULD LEARN FROM SAN FRANCISCO

By Dan Rattiner

I've been off visiting my grown son and daughter out on the west coast for a few days. If you really want to get away from all the seriousness in New York City, you really owe it to yourself to come out to California, particularly San Francisco.

New York, shouldering the weight of world affairs, takes its responsibilities very seriously. San Franciscans go down to the bay in Oakland, where all the stevedores and long-shoremen unload the freighters, and they collect the debris that has floated ashore and build massive sculptures there on the sand. The motorists enjoy it as they flash by on the adjacent freeway going toward San Jose. Amateur art critics.

They built a new stadium downtown for the baseball team. It's right on the waterfront, and the boats tie up at a dock that runs along the backside of the right field wall. During games, people in rowboats, canoes or kayaks assemble in the water behind where the boats are docked, hoping to catch home runs. Most have baseball mitts.

Just for fun, the builders of the stadium put a boardwalk on the top of the right field wall. When you go to a game, which we did during my visit, you can stroll along and look down into right field on one side and at the people in the boats on the other.

"There are a couple of guys who come sometimes rowing a giant baseball glove. They actually made it. They sit in the middle. It's quite something."

into being on the invitation committee, the decorations committee, the catering committee and so forth and so on, and so being out in the Hamptons in June and July is just a bother.

Show up August first, and you get the fruits of their labors. All you have to do is go. Piece of cake.

Or maybe because there is a certain finality to making the August rentals that is not the case with the July rentals. Think about it. You rent for July and just as everything is gearing up, you have to go home. But if you rent for August when you get to the end of your rental, EVERYBODY comes to the end of their rental. Really. If these were your choices, would you rather come to the movie when it starts and leave in the middle? Or would you rather come in the middle and stay to the end?

What I really think, however, is that August and the first half of September, actually, the entire month of September, are just better months to be here than June and July. August typically is a little warmer than July so there is more beach time, or, in certain years, the weather is just more interesting in August and September. You get big storms with thunder and lightning, sometimes even hurricanes in August and September. What could be a more dramatic display of nature than that? Also the ocean is warmer in August, and it is even warmer in September, because although the temperature of the air is cooling down, the ocean is so vast that it doesn't begin cooling until the first week of October. So ocean bathing, which can be chilly in the spring and early summer, is a delight for the last half of the summer season.

There are many things that come into bloom in June and July, but there are even more things in August and September. August and September are harvest times. Early corn peaks in August, potatoes peak in August, bluefish and bass peak in September.

The grape harvest comes in September and October.

Many people say their favorite month on the East End is September. The kids are back in school. The crowds are gone. And the heat of summer has come to an end and there is an exhilarating bite in the air. Also, you can get good dinner reservations without calling a week in advance.

Also, the main event of the year, the Hampton Classic Horse Show, has come and gone over the Labor Day weekend, and if you play your cards right and shell out a few more bucks, you might be able to keep your rental into mid-October and enjoy the turning of the leaves, the first fire in your fireplace and the excitement of the Hampton Film Festival, which comes in mid-October.

San Franciscans actually think this stuff up. Here were some of the stories that made the front page of the San Francisco Chronicle during my stay.

A former dominatrix, who a few years ago sold her services as an S&M specialist named Princess Calla, has been working for the past year and a half as a bureaucrat in the Department of the Treasury, a State office. Now she's filed a lawsuit against the State saying that a man in the office sexually harassed her. She claims he made lewd remarks to her, tried to take her to lunch, once touched her when she didn't want him to, and when she rebuffed him, made life difficult for her. This affected her work, her ability to concentrate and, after she wrote a letter to the head of the department asking for help and nothing was done, her productivity rating.

"I love my job," she said.

There's the story of the woman who has sued a Wendy's in San Jose for allegedly serving her a portion of chili that contained a human index finger.

The newspaper has thrown several reporters at this story. For one thing, they have found that no one at either that Wendy's or the main food production plant has filed a report saying they lost a finger. The authorities at Wendy's, noting the lack of such a report, deny the charge vigorously. They claim the woman concocted the claim. And they say the woman has a history of making unfounded claims, including one against General Motors in 2000 saying a front tire fell off her SUV on Interstate 880

Death Redux

We Almost Had it Stamped Out for Awhile, But Now It's Back

By Dan Rattiner

Living forever is not what it used to be.

Not long ago, there seemed a very real hope for living forever. People really believed, given the amazing things that were going on in science, that living forever was a real possibility in their lifetime. Man had gone to the moon. Polio was wiped out. Yellow fever was wiped out. There were all these new miracle medicines coming on the market. Any day now, death itself would be a thing of the past.

If you want to get a sense of just how exhilarating all this was, all you have to do is look at some of the old films taken at the 1939 World's Fair in New York City. Television was coming. People would travel to work with rocket packs. In the World of Tomorrow there would be no disease. We'd travel to far off planets. And perhaps even through time.

I think that the idea of living forever back then presented a real challenge to religion. Religion said, it's ashes to ashes and dust to dust, but if you were good there was a heaven. Church attendance went into a big decline. At the same time, these institutes where when you got sick and died you could be frozen and brought back later when science finally got there boomed. People lived on hope. There it was.

Personally, I liked the idea that it might be possible to live forever. Science should hurry up. Every year I was getting a year older. And that wasn't good. A few gray hairs appeared. It was a race against time.

But then, I have always seen myself as lucky. I could have been born anywhere. But I was born in the richest and best country on the planet. Also in the richest and best city on the

this was a wild thought, it seemed that I came down with something, but just before I did, God had looked and, seeing I had come down with this, had intervened. He wound the clock back ten years. And he had them discover the medicine.

Surely that proved I was lucky.

Well, the idea of living forever has certainly gone downhill. As this is written, that woman in Florida had just died and now they are fighting over the funeral. Now this historic pope, John Paul II, probably the greatest pope since John XXIII, after suffering the indignity of a feeding tube and a tracheotomy, has passed away and the world mourns. And in America, everybody is scrambling to fill out a living will that instructs the plug to be pulled if they sink into a vegetative state and require extreme measures.

"This is the most important decision you will ever make," said Time Magazine planet. And, from what I could see, the first century in the history of the world when living forever was really possible. And then when I was sixteen, there was a sign. I became really sick, and if they hadn't just invented a certain medicine only a few years before, I would have died. Instead, I got well. Completely well. In the scheme of things, and I knew even then

"This is the most important decision you will ever make," said Time Magazine on the front cover.

I thought — well, maybe this IS the most important decision I will ever make. But looking back from where?

Where did the fight for living forever go wrong? In 1960, President Kennedy said that by the end of the decade we would have a man walking on the moon, and we did. Certainly, back then, there was no expense being spared, no medical research unfunded, no medical devices not developed, no pills not brought to market. The truth is, that around twenty years ago, two things went wrong. One was that medical costs were going to bankrupt us. And the other was that we really weren't getting anywhere.

We'd defeat one disease and another would pop up. Legionnaires disease. AIDS. West Nile Virus. Asian Bird Flu. We'd thought there were only these already existing diseases, but bacteria were smarter than we thought.

As for the cost of the fight, we brought in health insurance plans, co-pays, medical assistants and generic medicines. We also sue our doctors like crazy. Medical care is actually going downhill.

There was a rise in interest in something called hospice, which is the goal of making you comfortable as you go into your final days. And we have assisted suicides, care of Dr. Kevorkian.

We even tell everybody when they are about to die. This too is a recent development. It was not long ago that many families decided, when someone had an incurable disease (nobody called it terminal), not to tell them. I can recall in my own family there were people who never were told they were dying. It seemed to have something to do with the dying person's personality. You told rough, tough men who could take it. They'd resign themselves to it. You hid it from anybody sensitive whose feelings might be hurt.

My sweet grandfather, before chemotherapy, before radiation and before any other drugs, got, well, he never knew the truth. Even after he had lost so much weight he was down to 90 pounds, his immediate family told him his ulcer was finally under control and the doctors said he had just turned the corner. Years later, I learned he had stomach cancer. He just hadn't lived long enough for the living forever to start, it seemed to me.

Today, is it any wonder that church attendance is back on the rise? We've lost the war. It's no secret. You are born, grow up, grow old, and then, since dying is actually a part of life, off you go, to make room for the next generation. That old story, which seemed so horrible back then, that the Eskimos send the elders off into the snow alone to freeze to death, didn't seem so bad all of a sudden.

For many, the lost war is just plain hard to take. And so they have returned to pray to their God, to ask forgiveness for their sins and for a happy afterlife. And in the Middle East just now, there are people blowing themselves up for God, sacrificing themselves in God's name in order to rid the world of those who either don't believe in their God or instead believe in some other God. It assures a good afterlife. And that's when, looking back, it matters. Doesn't it? •

Crosses on the Water Mill Hamlet Green

What?

Cemetery Crosses on the East Hampton Middle School Lawn?

By Dan Rattiner

The problem began when the children in health class at the East Hampton Middle School decided to put crosses up on the lawn to warn people of the dangers of smoking. The teacher thought it was a wonderful idea. She had been teaching about smoking in her Bonac on Board to Wellness anti-smoking campaign and Friday April 3 was to be the official Kick Butts Day.

And so it was that, on that Friday, the students were out front of the school banging these white wooden crosses into the ground with wooden mallets. You couldn't miss them. The school fronts right onto Newtown Lane, one of the two main streets in downtown East Hampton. Everyone who drove by could see them.

Almost immediately, the principal of the middle school, Gail Parker, began to get phone calls. Was this another protest against the war in Iraq? One caller said he thought these wooden crosses, which were white, were the same wooden crosses that were used in a war protest that took place on the hamlet green in Water Mill about a month ago. Another caller wanted to know if these crosses were to celebrate Easter, which would be a violation of the separation of church and state. You couldn't have crosses on a school lawn. You couldn't even say "Under God" in the pledge of allegiance to the flag.

Still another caller wanted to know if this was a memorial to our fallen troops in the war in Iraq. This caller said he thought the crosses had been used at the Vietnam War Memorial on the East Hampton Village Green three weeks ago, put there by the local war veterans. Another caller wondered if these crosses were in some way to honor the passing of Pope John Paul II. What the heck kind of a way was that to do it?

As a matter of fact, these WERE the crosses used first at the East Hampton Village Green to honor the dead in the war, and then borrowed from the vets for a war protest marking the second anniversary of the war on the

JOHN ROCKER TO PLAY BASEBALL IN NEW YORK

By Dan Rattiner

Sometimes you're out here in the Hamptons for awhile and the sun is shining and you think — I just want to go see a ball game. Hot dogs, cracker jacks, some sort of mascot jumping around, lots of very excellent ball players hitting home runs — and you say oh no, Shea Stadium is just too far. And Yankee Stadium is even farther. Oh, well.

Well, you can still enjoy great baseball right out here on eastern Long Island by going to the stadium to watch the Long Island Ducks. This minor league baseball team plays in a stadium, built for them just six years ago in Central Islip, just an hour from here. They have a man in a duck suit, about 8,000 loyal fans, great night games under the lights, their first pennant last year and now, John Rocker on the mound.

John who?

Yes, THE John Rocker, the man from rural Georgia who spewed bigotry against minority groups, especially minority groups from New York in that famous interview in Sports Illustrated in 1999, will be pitching for the Ducks. His comments at that time earned him the hatred of all New Yorkers, a shunning by his own Atlanta teammates, a suspension for 90 days from the baseball commissioner, a $20,000 fine and sensitivity training with a psychiatrist.

Here is what John Rocker said that got him in all that trouble.

"Imagine having to take the 7 train to the ballpark, looking like you're (riding through) Beirut next to some kid with purple hair next to some queer with AIDS right next to some dude who just got out of jail for the fourth time right next to some 20 year old mom with four kids."

He said some other stuff before they shut him up. But that was about the worst of it.

And that was a long time ago. Has he changed?

"I thought about it," the owner of the Ducks said when Rocker's agent asked if he would give Rocker a tryout. "I thought — what would the Pope do? He would give him another chance. You can't punish him forever. He's been punished enough."

Water Mill Green. One of the kid's grandparents was a war vet. He knew that these crosses were being stored in a garage.

By mid-afternoon, however, just six hours after the crosses had been put up, the crosses were gone, pulled up by the same students who had put them in, again under the supervision of Ginny Reale, the health teacher. Principal

Gail Parker had gotten the call from School District Superintendent Ray Gualtieri that that had just been about enough.

Well, if anybody has any other ideas about using these white crosses — to memorialize the 100,000 pound finback whale that fetched up on the beach in Southampton the other day, or mark the death, finally, of this very, very hard winter we have just endured, or to memorialize the passing of Terri Schiavo, the woman in a coma in Florida, or to memorialize Prince Ranier III of Monaco, the man who married the American actress Grace Kelly and made her a princess, or even, in some misguided attempt to celebrate the Jewish New Year, well, forget it.

and against a restaurant in Las Vegas called La Poco Loco that she claimed poisoned her daughter. She also sued a San Jose newspaper in 1999, saying a man who worked there exposed himself to her, just as she was starting to work there as a receptionist.

And now, because of this new claim, she has filed a lawsuit against the San Jose police, saying that when they entered her home with a search warrant after the finger complaint, they pushed her daughter too hard, injuring her shoulder.

"I'm really going to fight this now," the woman told a Chronicle reporter, "because they hurt my baby."

The police with the search warrant were looking for a Wal-Mart shopping bag and a red plastic lunch box that doubles as a makeup kit that she reportedly had with her when she went into the Wendy's. They would not reveal to the reporters what their raid had found, saying only that it was part of an ongoing investigation.

There is no denying the finger in the chili, however. Everyone agrees on that. Wendy's is offering $50,000 for any "credible" information that can lead to the discovery of how the digit got there. The police are also conducting another investigation, which involves sending the finger off to a lab, to determine if it was cooked as the same time as the beans. If not, it would indicate it had been put in there after. And that would be very suspicious.

San Franciscans love this stuff.

The reporter of the story gleefully ended it with these sentences. "While investigators have obtained a print from the fingertip, its quality is not good enough to run through databases for a match. But officials could visually match the fingerprint if they had a person the digit might belong to."

There's a story about a woman who works at the San Francisco Zoo exposing her breasts to a female gorilla there which I will tell you about next week.

Preserving History

Debating the Delicate Issue of Saving Beautiful Old Houses

By Sarah Gross

It may be a case of too little, too late, or perhaps there's hope yet, but Governor Pataki announced last month that the village of Southampton would receive a $7,500 grant to support efforts to preserve local buildings of historic significance. Astoundingly, there is still no policy in place that would do just this. Despite local efforts spearheaded by Councilman Steve Kenny, several important houses have been knocked down in recent years. It's a complicated matter, with residents protesting perceived strictures to their rights, and preservationists arguing on the side of history.

According to Richard Barons, Director of the Southampton Historical Museum, there seems to be a fear of big brother taking control of people's property, particularly in Southampton. "The area's getting more and more vocally negative. People think [we] want to impose tighter zoning controls." But Barons has a more benign suggestion: "What needs to happen is we need to do an inventory of historic structures in Southampton town, handled by the historical society with guidance from consultants. We need to take a real, careful, not cursory, look. What buildings are there? What neighborhoods from what periods are coexisting? This list should go to the county planner. Nothing should be done with it but when someone applies to do something, a red flag should go up which says this is an historic structure which the community cares about. Then the group involved in the survey should be notified and there can be hearings and they can talk about it. It means it wouldn't be done in silence."

Councilman Kenny has proposed some other options. After seeing his earlier legislative efforts rejected three years ago amid claims from residents that his ideas were too Draconian, he has come up with some new suggestions to try to win support. Calling it a "process of persuasion versus regulation" at a meeting with the

WILD SCENE IN NOYAC AS FISH TRY TO SPAWN

By Dan Rattiner

Every year in the early spring a species of fish called Alewives come at night from the open water of Peconic Bay into Big Fresh Pond to spawn. They are a good eating fish, and so, when the alewives run, fishermen have for centuries arrived with dip nets late at night during the run to take as many as they can as they come through a narrow stream that runs between these two bodies of water. Inside of half an hour, you get all the fish you want. Then you go home. It's a real treat.

But now, it's gotten very out of hand. Last year, some fishermen, looking at a more commercial approach, took to placing large nets across the entire stream, bottling up the alewives so practically all of them could be swept up before dawn.

Apparently, it never occurred to anybody that if the fish didn't get into the pond to spawn — and adult alewives always return to where they were born — there would be no home base for the alewives to return to at Noyac Pond the following year. Or if it did occur to the fishermen, they didn't care. In any case, this year, estimates are that only about a third of the number of alewives tried to swim up into the pond. Where were the rest of them?

The answer was, of course, eaten by the diners at local restaurants one year ago, who had featured alewives on the menu for a couple of weeks after the run. Now, how come nobody could have figured that out ahead of time?

And so we have a problem. Is there a solution to this problem? Well, the local branch of gov-

Bridgehampton Citizens Advisory Committee last week, Kenny suggested that homeowners who planned to demolish their houses could have the option of moving them to town-owned sites at the town's expense. The donated houses could potentially be used for low-income families or volunteer emergency workers. But as Kenny correctly outlined in a phone interview on Friday, it's the method by which you ensure that it happens that is key. "There are heavy-handed approaches, and educational ones.....right now we are working on a new demolition permit process with a waiting period, for buildings that are over 75 years old." He now advocates any measures acceptable to the residents that would provide some measure of protection for older structures.

Kenny's colleague in arms is also pondering the problem. Councilwoman Linda Kabot has suggested the formation of historic districts modeled on the town of Brookhaven, which relies on a percentage of residents to agree to the designation of an area as architecturally important. Once labeled, the voluntary districts would have more say in determining design standards and demolition permits.

The New York State Office of Parks, Recreation and Historic Preservation (OPRHP) has been encouraging such ideas in local communities across the state. They see historic preservation as a tool to encourage local revitalization, heritage tourism and economic development. Whether they're right or not remains to be seen, but in the meantime, there continues to be a battle between those residents who want full control over their properties and those who want a code in place to protect the look of the town.

Without despairing, Barons added a note of resignation about the current situation: "People in East Hampton seem to be more actively fond of their historic heritage. The Historical Society in East Hampton was started by the summer colonists who just adored the wonderful, rural, artistic vision. There's a long tradition of realizing that the open spaces and historical environment is why people want to live there, and why houses cost so much. There's a slower educational process in Southampton township."

The debate aside, one of the real-life problems currently at issue is that with no oversight or community policing in place, people aren't even sure that they've purchased a building with any architectural integrity. The National Trust has its own listings of Historic Places, but communities and municipalities have often thought that being on a National Register was honor enough, and therefore no further action was needed to protect specific properties.

But as Barons so succinctly put it, every preservation issue starts because something's gone awry. Perhaps the recent demolitions are the catalyst for new laws that preserve our past even as we try to carve out our future. Shouldn't they be? And maybe Barons has the right idea when he suggests a cataloging of inventory of structures and spaces, which would mean we'd get some notice of intent before buildings are destroyed. If this isn't done, we may yet see Hamptonites forming human chains around contested properties. And that would be a sight at least as ugly as historic buildings being bulldozed.

ernment responsible for our bays, inlets and wetlands is the Southampton Town Trustees, and so they passed a new law and put signs up early this spring on a pole reading NO PERSON SHALL SET, DRAW OR CAST ANY NETS OR SEINES IN ANY OF THE FRESH WATER PONDS OR STREAMS WITHIN THE TOWN OF SOUTHAMPTON. The day after they put this sign up they found that somebody, during the night, had wiggled it loose and thrown it into the inlet. So the Trustees put it back up.

Now, however, there are reports that the fishermen are putting on waders and taking big metal buckets out into the shallow inlet to catch the fish by the hundreds during this year's run.

"I don't know what we can do about that," said Trustee Fred Havermeyer. "We didn't pass anything about garbage cans."

Why don't the Trustees have somebody go down to the Inlet at night during spring alewives run?

Manpower, Havermeyer says. The enforcement officers work during the daytime and at 5 p.m. go home. And the Trustees don't have the funding to put a person on the job extra.

This is ridiculous. Maybe the Trustees don't have enough money for extra enforcement, but certainly the Town does. The Town collected the staggering sum of $3 million in real estate fees this past year. This is above and beyond what they collect from the citizenry in local taxes. Supposedly, this money can only be used for open land preservation. But it doesn't take a genius to see that this sort of wildlife preservation falls into the same sort of category. It seems a few papers could be shuffled around. And a spare ten thousand dollars or so found.

Alternately, there are people who would be willing to be deputized to watch out for the start of the alewives season for free. I mean if the people of southern Arizona can get a group

Gabreski

Could Westhampton be Home to a Homeland Security Unit?

By Jerry Cimisi

According to the Suffolk County Executive's office, Gabreski Airport in Westhampton will become — in fact, is becoming now — a much better place for not only flying, but ground-based businesses.

"It was like the wild west out there," said Ed Dumas, spokesman for County Exec Steve Levy. "There were tenants who had laid claim to property without leases. There were companies who were very much behind in their rent. There were landing fees not being collected."

The changes at Gabreski go beyond the county hiring a new airport manager. Southampton Town and Suffolk County have drawn up a Master Plan that will give incentives for high tech businesses to locate their operations at Gabreski Airport, whose main claim to fame — and it's a large claim — is that this is where the renowned 106th Air National Guard Rescue Wing has its base.

In a proposal of a nearly finalized Master Plan, Suffolk County, in conjunction with Southampton Town, is offering about 350,000 feet of office space and 14 plots on about 58 acres on the west side of the airport. During a recent phone interview, County Executive

Levy said, "For a long time development has stagnated because of wrangling between the county and the town. There was always the debate as to who would be the lead agency in such development. This master plan will elicit a better cooperation between us."

The Suffolk County Department of Economic Development will oversee proposals of businesses that want to come in to the airport.

Though one aviation-related customer has expressed interest, according to Levy. Northrop-Grumman might use the airport to test its craft. (Not so long before its merger, and before much of its operations left Long Island, Grumman was one of the area's largest employers.)

Currently the airport does have businesses other than aviation. For instance, there is Holy Moses Cheesecake, Black Sheep TV and a cafeteria.

Levy said the available plots at the airport are in a designated Empire Economic Zone, a provision by which New York State will give any businesses there tax breaks.

As recently as last autumn, the airport's most famous tenant, the 106th Air National Guard Rescue Wing, was in danger of being relocated and absorbed into a base elsewhere in the country. That seems much less likely to happen now, said Levy. "Since then, the state and the county have done an intensive lobbying effort, which included higher-ups in the military, to have the government keep the bases here." The final decision on that is due in two months, added Levy. The county has also waived last year's fee for the Guard's use of the base, as well as

It was renamed Francis S. Gabreski Airport, after a former base commander and WWII flying ace.

Southampton Town will manage the Generic Environmental Impact Statement.

Levy related that he hopes 600-900 jobs will be created at the airport. "Everyone would like to see high-tech industry there. We plan to make any growth related to jobs, not flights. There is a consensus among the people around the airport that they would like us to be good neighbors and we will continue to be so."

offering the Guard an addition seventy plus acres of buffer zone if the base remains at Gabreski.

The 1,486-acre airport was built by the government during World War II. It was deactivated in 1969 and turned over to the county. In 1991 it was renamed Francis S. Gabreski Airport, after a former base commander and WWII flying ace.

One proposed use of the airport is as a possible training facility for Homeland Security. Levy said the state has been looking to create a base for this newest department of the Cabinet. "They're setting up one in the Hudson Valley right now, but it would make sense logistically to have one here also."

What exactly would a Homeland Security training facility be like? A spokesperson for the New York office of Homeland Security said the department could not comment about such proposals at this stage, but County Executive Levy said, "We look at it as a place for research and development, for creating new methods and products that would better help the country in these times."

There is no Wal-Mart at Gabreski

At any rate, Levy said such a base is tangential to development at the airport. In other words, it would be nice, but would not be necessary for other development.

Levy added that during his time as a county legislator he was amazed at the lack of funds Suffolk garnered from Gabreski. There were rents and landing fees that had not been collected. In 2004, the county collected over $100,000 in back rent and $200,000 in landing fees—this compares with only $2,000 (no, this is not a misprint) in landing fees collected in the year before Mr. Levy took office.

As always, there are voices of cautious pessimism. Dennis Suskind, of the Southampton Town Board, said the recent "love-fest" between the town and the county over this projected future of Gabreski has not been put before the town council. "Nobody wants to be in the way of progress," he said, "but you also have to think about the increased traffic in the area if you have 600 or even close to one thousand workers coming to the airport every day." At any rate, he said he was very interested in seeing the Master Plan that is supposed to be presented and approved by the town by mid May.

Southampton Supervisor Patrick Heaney, who apparently worked diligently with the county to form the Master Plan for Gabreski had been quoted in a press release as "being thrilled with the progress and cooperation on this issue in the past few months," but perhaps because of being a bit under the weather (according to his office) did not respond for more detailed comment on the future of Westhampton's venerable airport.

of retirees to sit in aluminum lawn chairs on the American side of the Mexican border to look out for illegal immigrants, then there's got to be a few people, for the sake of the environment, willing to take round the clock shifts sitting on the Noyac Road Bridge looking out for the appearance of people in waders with nets or buckets. This can be done.

Finally, I would just like to note that this is simply another example of the marketplace in a free and democratic society mindlessly able to screw things up. That's why we have regulators. Thirty years ago, the air in our cities was so full of smog and smoke that they were practically unlivable. Today the skies are clear again because of regulation. Thirty years ago, the temperature of the world began rising due to the throwing of crap up into the stratosphere and, of course, today it is even worse. Sometimes things are just too much fun.

Let the next generation worry about it. •

Westhampton's 106th Saves Lives During New Jersey Flood

By Christian McLean

As the rains continued to come down, the causeway across the Delaware River went underwater sometime between Saturday night and early Sunday morning, April 3. Soon it would surmount the shores of the 200-acre Mashipacong Island. To make matters worse, several miles up river the Pennsylvania Power and Light's Wallenpaupack Hydroelectric Plant had opened its floodgates and was churning out 9,000 cubic pounds of water a second. It was an absolute disaster.

To compound the situation further, a family of five along with their two dogs and cat was still on the island, marooned by the night's storm. To say the least, Montague Township Emergency Services Coordinator, David Coss, was looking at one hell of a Sunday morning.

At 7 a.m. that Sunday morning, Coss telephoned the Director of Sussex County's Office of Emergency Management, Eskil "Skip" Danielson, for help. The river was too rough for an attempt at amphibious rescue.

Danielson contacted the New Jersey Police

Department's medevac NorthStar Department who responded to the call with a helicopter. At 9:50 a.m. they took to the air, and for a moment, it seemed like the family would be brought to safety in a matter of minutes. But then the extreme weather, which now also included sleet and rain, persuaded them this was way beyond their capabilities and they returned to base. It was impossible.

The United States Coastguard was contacted next, with hopes that their well-trained rescue squad could penetrate the disastrous climes. Unfortunately, their helicopter was already deployed to another rescue operation in Atlantic City. And so a call went out to the Air Force Rescue Coordination Center in Langley, Virginia.

Meanwhile, back in the Hamptons, it was a regular, albeit chilly, Sunday morning and the 106th Rescue Wing (RQW), out of Gabreski Airport in Westhampton and consisting of two helicopters and a four engine command aircraft, was in the middle of their fourth and final day of training operations. They were in the air bearing east toward Gardiner's Island when a call from Langley came over the radio.

The 106th's duty officer immediately scrapped the training mission and diverted the team. Known to hold some of the finest pararescue jumpers in America, it came as no surprise the 106th was contacted. There was a quick fuel up and briefing back at their base and then the 101st and 102nd squadrons took to the sky in the HC-130 Hercules, fixed wing tanker, and the two HH-60 Pave Hawk helicopters.

The citizens of Mashipacong Island weren't the only ones in need of rescuing. 9 miles to the north, near Port Jervis, New York there were several people, including firefighters and civilians, trapped on a boat in the storm in the ever-quickenening Neversink River. Also, at one house by the side of the river, a man stood on his upstairs deck, awaiting help.

Before the 106th Rescue Wing could assist those on the Neversink, they decided to head toward Mashipacong Island, where the situation was more urgent. But the weather was not co-

THE 1ST MILLION DOLLAR SUMMER RENTAL (ALMOST)

By Dan Rattiner

Care to be known as the person paying the most rent for a summer home in the Hamptons? In certain circles, that would pass as a badge of honor. Well, here's your chance. Philanthropist Marcia Riklis has just put her oceanfront digs in Southampton on the market, for 3 months only, for $950,000. Divide it out and it comes to about $9,000 a day, so it's surely something that is fit for a king. And it is.

You'll get a one-hundred-year old 22,000 square foot estate on 8 acres with 12 bedrooms, 12 1/2 baths, a gym, a basketball court and an Olympic pool. Also a whole bunch of feet on the ocean. Location? It's on Meadow Lane just a few doors down from Calvin Klein's 60-room castle. Also a whole lot of other heavy hitters.

Marcia Riklis, 53, is the daughter of Meshulam Riklis, the wealthy corporate raider now in his eighties who was at one time married to a beautiful woman many years his junior, named Pia Zadora. Since she wanted a career in Hollywood, he got it for her, launching it with a huge billboard of her high up on top of a building on Wilshire Boulevard. She enjoyed some success as an actress and to a lesser degree as a singer, in the 1980s.

Anyway, that was then and this is now. Hurry and call your broker.

operating. Like the previous attempts made by the NorthStar medevac squad, the 106th was forced down, landing at Greenwood Lake Airport over 40 miles east of Montague Township. They tried again, but snow squalls and torrential rain beat them back to the landing strip for the second time.

By noon the damage to the homes on the island had already begun, and although the river continued to rise, the weather was beginning to break. And so the 106th choppered in, landing on a patch of farmland near the occupied house. The pararescuers crossed the rain-soaked terrain and led the five residents and their pets from the home back across the saturated land, where they loaded them onto the helicopters. Minutes later the helicopters were up in the air again, only to touchdown moments later at Montague Town Hall where the family was finally safe.

From here, the 106th flew north to the boat in trouble in the choppy waters of the Neversink River. Inside the vessel, three firemen and a few volunteers had tried to use the boat to save a man stranded on his deck. But they had failed and were now in trouble themselves, the boat pinned against the bank of the river. However, help from many quarters was on the way. By the time the 106th crossed the border back into New York and arrived, the men in the boat had been saved by a land rescue. And so the 106th went to rescue the man perched on his upstairs deck as the water engulfed his home. One of the HH-60s deployed a pararescuer, who came down a rope, helped the man secure himself to the line, and then had the chopper take them to the safety of a nearby schoolyard on higher ground.

At this point, the surge of water was beginning to recede, but the 106th Rescue Wing stayed in the area in case any other emergencies were reported. They landed at nearby Teterboro Airport to catch their breath, refuel and re-center themselves. Then they made rounds of the river and water damaged areas, but their rescue services were not called upon again and so finally they returned to Gabreski Airport Monday morning, almost twenty-four hours after they departed on their training mission.

The families of Mashipacong Island were not allowed back into their extensively damaged homes for almost a week after the Delaware River subsided.

After the mission was over, Governor George E. Pataki stated in a press conference, "Once again, we witnessed the rapid and decisive response of members of the 106th Rescue Wing, who turned a perilous situation into a heroic rescue. From performing rescue operations in Iraq to their deep-sea rescue in the now renowned 'Perfect Storm' and yesterday's mission in the Delaware Water Gap, the heroism and courage of the 106th have been on display time and time again."

A TANKER COULD HAVE HIT HER

By Dan Rattiner

As I am sure you know — the whole East End knows — a huge, dead finback whale was washed up on the beach in Southampton down by Meadow Lane ten days ago. At 64 feet long and 100,000 pounds, it was the largest fish ever to park himself (well, herself) on the beach in almost a century.

What became of her? Well, there was the business of how she died. There were no obvious indications of severe injury. And so an autopsy was performed by the Riverhead Foundation for Marine Research and Preservation biologists. The preliminary results show that she was apparently struck by some very large blunt force — probably a big ship. There were minor contusions on her right side, but upon investigation it was found that whatever caused the contusions caused damage to internal organs on that side, and that is probably what caused her death. She had been dead for about a week when she fetched up here on a storm tide.

The creature has been cut up, and some of the bones given to the nearby Shinnecock Indian tribe who consider whales sacred. Native ceremonies will be performed, and eventually the bones will be displayed in the Shinnecock Indian museum on Montauk Highway. As for the rest of her, she was cut up and transported to nearby dunes that are under the jurisdiction of the Southampton Town Trustees, where she was buried in the sand.

Who's Here

By Josh May

Unless you work in the music business, read album notes compulsively or your name is Mel Brooks, you've probably never heard of Cynthia Daniels. But if you've ever watched NBC News with Peter Jennings, heard The Producers' cast recording, or happened to be attending punk rock shows in Boston at the Rathskeller in the late '70s, you've definitely heard her work.

As a sound engineer — one of only a handful of women in the business — Daniels has had her hands on and turned her ear to so many projects, it's a bit mind boggling. During any given week she might be mixing a new rock album, as she just did for The Nancy Atlas Project's new CD that hits this week, looping vocal tracks for a film with Alec Baldwin, mixing Whoopi Goldberg's live show for CD release and working with a full symphony. For Daniels, it's all good, as long as it sounds good.

"I always knew I was going to be in the music business," she says with a smile, sitting in front of the recording studio 91 East in Bridgehampton, where you can find her most days. "Back when I was sixteen I was dating a guy who was a guitar player in a band and there were always girls around, hanging out. And most of them were happy to hang around, but I didn't like to just watch. I was always going up to see how they were recording and I made them teach me how they did it."

From there it wasn't long before Daniels graduated from college in Boston. Rather than the typical graduate gift — a car, plane tickets to Europe or a few months rent — she got a PA system. "It was a great time in music. There was a lot of high energy, high aggression and, well, just high everything," she says with a laugh. "It was the days of Jonathan Richman, The Modern Lovers and all those people and it was just a great time to be." Still laughing, she adds, "No details."

After spending some time in Boston in the rock scene, Daniels made the next logical step in her career — to country music. "I love all kinds of music. To be inside a really big recording studio with a full orchestra, it's amazing," she says. Actually, the leap from one genre to another is pretty typical of her career and the country gig found her traveling the country recording some of the greats in the business. "After that I knew that if I wanted to go anywhere in the business, I had to go to LA or New York," she explains. "I ended up in New York because somebody there had a job for me, and I started at the bottom at a very large recording studio called ANR Recording under the tutelage of Phil Ramone." There, Daniels worked with Steely Dan, Billy Joel, on major movies and really got a lot of experience working on a variety of projects.

"The way that I can explain it, is that I'm one third politician, one third technician and one third musician."

Which begs the question, what exactly does she do? When asked to explain the process in layman's terms, the description is long and technical-term heavy, though it is exactly what the job title says — she engineers the sound. From getting microphones set up properly, to setting the levels on each track and ensuring that everything sounds right, Daniels has her hands on every sound that comes out of the studio. From the first note to the last, it's her show. "The way that I can explain it, is that I'm one third politician, one third technician and one third musician," she says. After putting in her time at ANR Recording and getting her chops, Daniels happened upon her next opportunity. It represented a move away from the rock and roll scene, but as she says, "Women have a particular role in rock and hip-hop, and that role is not a technical or masterful one. It's a very male dominated side of the business and Scorpion doesn't want a female behind the console." Odd, because you'd figure most rock stars would want women fiddling with their knobs.

"I moved to a smaller studio and one engineer left and I quickly became the chief engineer and started working eighteen hours a day," she says. "I fell into a jazz niche and we had one of the best pianos in New York and then it was suddenly, 'Oh, she does jazz,' and then I met a client and started recording Broadway shows. That's just the way the business works."

From punk rock to country, back to rock and into jazz and then Broadway, it's been a long and eclectic road. You might find her looping tracks (re-recording movie lines that had compromised sound to be inserted after filming is done) at 91 East for Alec Baldwin, or mixing Whoopi Goldberg's new album — "The first two hours were funny," she laughs, "but eight hours into it, it wasn't so funny."

And a quick look at her credits and you see names like Vanessa Williams, Chaka Kahn, the theme songs for NBC News and ABC News, cast recordings for numerous Broadway shows — including The Producers, for which she won her first Grammy after a number of nominations — movies and the list goes on and on. If it's got music, then chances are that Daniels has worked somewhere in it, on it or pretty damn close at some point in her career. But within all that work there have to be a few standout experiences.

"One of my favorite projects, which remains dear to me, was working with Flora Purim and Aíto Moreira who are some pretty heavy Brazilian jazz musicians," she says. "Something incredibly magical has happened in my experiences with Brazilian jazz. There's some level of non-verbal communication, a serious essence there. I think I just love the feeling of music being made. You just get access to an artist's soul when they're allowed to improvise. And working with Vanessa Williams and Chaka Kahn was also so amazing."

Her passion is truly revealed when she starts talking about the music and the process of working with artists and it's clear that her taste in music is matched by the number of genres in which she's worked. Ask her what's in the CD changer in her car and she responds, "Miles Davis' 'Kind of Blue,' Joni Mitchell's 'Court and Spark,' Melissa Etheridge, Eminem, and U2's latest album, 'How to

Dismantle an Atomic Bomb."

Throw into the mix the opportunities that she has to work on films and other projects and it's quite a career she fashioned for herself. Fortunately there is a bit of time to kick back and relax, East End style. "I've been coming out here for twenty years and I've lived out here for seven years fulltime — fulltime at least when I'm not running to the city to work," she says. "I love it out here. I'm happy going for a bike ride, sitting in town in front of the Golden Pear and just being. And for all the talk of traffic and too many people, I know where to go to get away from the traffic and the people. I love going out to Montauk Point and walking on the rocks and if a really special friend comes out I might even take them to Walking Dunes."

But with all that she's done, there are still a few goals left on her wish list. "I'd love to write a hit song. I want to help Nancy Atlas make this a hit album and I want to do her next album. I really do believe in her and her music. I'd like to do more great shows on Broadway. Those shows are so much fun, and the pressure is enormous, but it's an amazing experience. I'd love to work with Stevie Wonder and David Bowie. I think they're amazing musicians and working with them would be great."

After sitting for a moment, she says with a smile, "Nothing beats sitting in the studio with a musician, getting deeply inside the music. It doesn't matter who it is, if they're good, they're good. And you're there at the moment, and that's what's most beautiful about it. Being in that moment."

In January 1999, Rocker was asked what he thought of New York City.

"The biggest thing I don't like about New York are the foreigners. You can walk an entire block in Times Square and not hear anybody speaking English. Asians and Koreans and Vietnamese and Indians and Russians and Spanish people and everything up there. How the hell did they get in this country?"

Keep in mind that his Atlanta team was playing New York and he was told it sold tickets to say bad things about the enemy.

Rocker is now 30 years old. In the early 1990s, when he was in his early twenties, he was the star reliever for the Atlanta Braves. Then came the interview. And not surprisingly, his athletic skills went downhill under all the pressure. He apologized on ESPN in January of 2000. In June of 2000, he said he would ride the 7 subway to Shea when the Braves played in New York. Mayor Giuliani tried to bar Rocker from the subway, citing safety reasons. (His.) So he never went.

The following year, he was traded to Cleveland. And two years after that he was traded to Tampa Bay, where he played in just two games, then had surgery to repair a torn rotator cuff. He did not play at all in 2004.

Can we forgive him? I think so. And the Ducks coaches say he still throws a good fastball. He should do well with the Ducks. And maybe you ought to go out there some evening and contribute to a fine night at the ball game and a second chance for John Rocker. •

"Come to think of it, I did see a man go running across the parking lot around three in the afternoon." My office window overlooks the lot. "I wonder if that had anything to do with it."

I thought briefly of the police asking me about the man running across the parking lot. Tall and thin. Maybe 35. I think he was wearing bell bottoms. Bell bottoms? Why hadn't I noticed him more closely?

I looked over to where my car, a new Land Rover, was parked out front. It was still there. I went over to it and I checked to see if it was locked, which it wasn't. I used my remote and beeped it locked.

"This really bothers me," I said to Leslie. "And why a Saab? Why not my car? My car's right out front."

"That's probably the safest place for it. Who'd want to break into it with all the motorists going by?"

The more I thought about it, the more I was sure there had to be some other explanation to all of this. I know cars must get stolen in Bridgehampton. But in all those years, I know of just one. I remember friends I knew had their car stolen while they were having dinner at a restaurant on Main Street late one summer evening five years ago. It had been in that badly lit parking area out back.

But this theft today was in broad daylight. It couldn't be that cars are being stolen in broad daylight in our little town.

Back inside the building, I wandered around aimlessly.

"Nothing's even been taken from a car parked in the lot before," someone said.

Finally, after the police came and filled out a report, I left. I passed the building in Wainscott that Lou Meisel owns and has for sale. There was a sign with his name on it and phone number. I really should call him. But then, my cell phone rang. It was Carol Collinge, our classified manager.

"They found it," she said.

"Where?"

"In the Bridgehampton Country Market lot. On the other side of the building where you couldn't see it."

"And she remembered parking there?"

"Now she remembers parking there."

"How did she find it?"

"She didn't. Somebody had picked her up and taken her home. Then, Christian in the editorial department was leaving, and he got in his car and headed west. He passed the market, which was closed, but then he saw there was still one car in the lot. A black car. So now (bleep) is coming back to get it."

And now you know why this person, whose name is (bleep), must remain nameless. •

DOLANS MAKE THE CABLEVISION STOCK GO UP

By Dan Rattiner

The father and son team who run Cablevision have figured out a way to make the stock in their $6 billion company go up. What they have done, James and Charles Dolan, is launch a satellite to compete with DirecTV and Dish, a kick in the head that caused them to begin bleeding at the rate of $400 million a year with no hope of ending it. Then they attacked the Mayor of New York and the New York Jets by putting in a bid for $640 million to buy the West Side railroad yards, the site of a proposed new Jets stadium, with money they didn't have. Then they put in another bid to buy a bankrupt regional cable company called Adelphia for another $16 billion they didn't have.

This week, to the thunderous applause of Wall Street, they agreed to sell their satellite for $300 million to DirecTV, and shut down the satellite business. They got outbid by the New York Jets to buy the West Side railroad yards (thus will come the stadium, a convention center, and if we're lucky, the Super Bowl and then the Olympics in 2009 and 2012 respectively), and they got outbid by Time-Warner for Adelphia.

For thus failing to continue doing stupid things, they have been rewarded by having their stock go up. All hail the brilliant Charles and James Dolan of Cablevision, the Long Island TV Cable Service monopoly.

What will they think of next? •

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Sheltered Islander #344

Tax Day...the oldest, established, permanent, flogging, crap game.

April 15....A day that will live in infamy. Federal income tax was instituted during W.W.II. When the government realized how much money it got, it kept it going and created the Internal Revenue Service. I remember reading an article in Newsweek years ago that the IRS is the only government agency that is not audited by outside agencies. They audit themselves, if they bother. It illustrates that even other government agencies are afraid of them.

One category-the IRS needs is a category for Deductible Island Expenses, or D.I.E. deductions for short. Both coasts of the U.S. are dotted with hundreds of little islands and all islanders have special needs. DIE deductions should include:

Ferry fees. Justified because islands are America's first line of defense. In the event of an invasion by sea, isn't it logical that an invasion force would first test the native resistance by attacking the islands along the coasts? Of course it is! So people on islands have to stave off invading hordes. In the event the hordes sail around and attack the mainland, all the islanders of America, up and down both coasts, will have them surrounded.... Therefore I think deductible ferry fees is a small sacrifice for the government to make to secure its coastal borders, especially since its land borders are already a bust.

Food and drinks consumed on ferry lines for survival till your ship comes in. In order to get off island on Sunday you have to get in line two hours before you arrive on Friday. Well, you have to eat... and that should be tax deductible.

Cost of cell phone minute overage because A) you have to call and tell the person waiting for you where you are in line B) you have to use this time productively so you do business C) you have to call your neighbor to let the dog out.

15% of your bar tab at The Dory. Waiting on long lines can increase stress, so it may be medically necessary to consume a bit now and then. They have specialists there who concoct special Libations for Line Languishees.

All Fast food overage costs. Since the nearest fast food is 45 minutes away AFTER you get off the boat, you have to buy extra food. It's impossible to drive home from McDonald's without eating French fries and when you open your window to pay the ferry ticketer, they get a whiff of a Big Mac...and suddenly instead of the ticket being $9, it's $4 and a cheeseburger.

All costs related to keeping a boat. Since islanders are constantly patrolling our waters against foreign enemies even while pleasure boating, it just makes sense that these costs are deductible. Any islander who spots an enemy destroyer or aircraft carrier crossing the ferry lanes will undoubtedly report it the minute they put into dock after the fish stop biting or the wine and cheese run out.

.5% Ferry Gas reimbursement. For some reason gas on an island increases in value when it gets on a ferry. It must be special gas.

15% Rent or Mortgage Deduction Tolerance Credit. People who live on island year round, or just for the season, have to endure unbelievable rudeness from tourists in the summer. The island lives by the Golden Rule, but tourists spending a few days are often clueless about this. One example: my brother and I had finished clamming and were bringing in our haul. Someone had parked behind us in such a way that we were trapped. The man came out when he saw us and launched into a diatribe about illegally clamming in front of the house he rented for the week! I was going to inform him that we had permits and his rental did not extend into the water anyway, but David told him we rented that clambled... The frustrated man pressed on and demanded to know just how many clams we were taking away. "Two pecks," I said.

"Well, how much is that?" the man demanded. "Half a bushel," answered brother Dave.

The man maintained his arrogant stance for another minute trying desperately not to reveal he didn't know a bushel from a peck from a hug around his neck....then backed up his SUV to free us. I don't know an islander who doesn't have a similar story. And I say, the IRS should kick back a few clams to every islander for touristial molestation.

To relax from your tax attack, go to the show Guys & Dolls at the school starting Friday, April 15. It's the only way to discover the location of "the oldest, established, permanent, floating, crap game in New York...."

Beach Camp On The Bay

Seeing Starfish And Swimming With Sharks At Cornell's Cedar Beach

By Karen Lund

The children were cold, their faces ruddy from being out in the salt marsh. But they didn't care. Enthusiastic and confident, they were having fun learning about local marine life by hiking around the beach and rolling up their sleeves as they gingerly poked hands into holding tanks that housed marine life. Oblivious to the education at hand, they were mesmerized by presenters who fascinated them with facts about sea creatures and gave them opportunities to touch and hold such animals as starfish and whelks. All of this took place right here on the North Fork on a chilly Friday in March at the Suffolk County Marine Environmental Center (a Cornell extension program) at Cedar Beach in Southold.

Judi Veeck, Public Affairs Director for Cornell Cooperative Extension of Suffolk County, explained that the marine programs "give kids an opportunity to learn and appreciate the environment in a fun way. They learn by doing, which is a part of the 4-H motto." The children not only learned about marine life but also enjoyed themselves. Some of them had attended Cornell's Peconic Dunes camp during the previous summer, and these veteran campers declared it the best summer of their lives.

The day began with presentations on how to treat marine animals well. Stacey Myers, the Youth Education Director of the Marine Center in Southold, focused on creatures of the Peconic Bay Estuary and the food chains found there. This morning workshop was designed as a preview of what children will be doing at Peconic Dunes camp this summer. The potential campers (ages 6-10) and veteran campers were invited to the rooms with the holding tanks that had water pumped in from Peconic Bay. They had a chance to touch many creatures and to see a (non-native) shark swimming around in his own tank. Livia Kelly of Laurel found that the "sea star was pretty bumpy" while her brother, Michael, felt that the "water was cold." They both agreed that they had a lot of fun. Another sibling, Blaze, had attended the summer camp at Peconic Dunes. On this morning in March, her favorite activity was "the touch tank because it had fascinating animals." Their mother joined in by observing that this program, "enables my children to be close to nature and to develop a love and appreciation for marine animals."

All the children and their parents were invited by presenter Amity Bintliff to take a short hike to the salt marsh habitat where they identified characteristics of this marine environment and osprey nests. During a beach scavenger hunt, they looked for native and non-native items as well as marine debris. Amy declared, "This was a fun and exciting day for kids to learn about our local marine environment at the Peconic Bay Estuary."

Michael and Livia dip into a tank filled with sea creatures

In addition to providing a fun day for parents and children to share, the Cornell staff hopes to educate all about the fragile marine environment.

"We hope to focus attention on the important issue of marine debris or wash-up, and how it's effecting our beaches and the ecological environment and what we can all do about it," said Mary Morgan, the Director of Marine Youth Education.

Cornell offers many hands-on programs for children during the spring and summer months. Local families are looking forward to the open houses that will be held this weekend on Sunday, April 17 at Peconic Dunes Camp (visit www.cce.cornell.edu/suffolk). They will be making choices about which program to attend. These will be hard decisions since all the programs are intriguing and great fun!

Junior Marine Biologist Program (For children ages 3-5)

A two-hour marine education program for three to five year-old children and a parent/guardian that includes a visit to the marine animal touch tanks, crafts and beach activities. June 23 & 24, 10 a.m.-noon, $20/child. This is a one day program.

Kayak Expedition Program (For children ages 12-14)

Kayak Camp is an introduction to kayak safety and beginning paddling techniques. During the course of the week students will explore and investigate salt marsh habitats and areas of Peconic Bay. Students will collect local marine organisms and study them. Camp requires a large amount of physical activity and we reserve the right to administer swimming tests to insure the safety of students and staff. Students do not need kayaking experience. Monday - Friday 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Session 1: July 25- July 29 Session 2: August 1- August 5, $225/child.

Marine Summer Fun Days (For children ages 6-8)

Are you looking for a unique week-long summer experience for your child? They'll have some fun in the sun while learning about Long Island's vital marine environment. Children will explore Peconic Bay, learn about plants and animals in the salt marsh, observe and handle live marine animals and enjoy activities such as seining, beach games, and marine crafts. Monday -Friday 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., $225/child.

Scientific Research Camp (For children ages 9-12)

Dive into marine science and environmental studies in Scientific Research Camp. This informational camp includes intensive studies in marine biology. Classes will include hands-on outdoor activities, scientific labs, dissections and data collection for EPA water and air quality standards. Participants will continue to build on topics throughout the week. This scientific camp is designed for serious students, extremely interested in marine science. Monday-Friday 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. $225/child, Session 1: June 27 - July 1, Session 2: July 5 - 8 (4 day program - $200), Session 3: July 25 - 29, Session 4: August 8-12.

Fabulous Fresh Floral Designs Now Available At The Down Home Store

By Susan Whitney Simm

Paul Rueckwald, known as the proprietor of the Down Home Store who turned that spot into the North Fork's most stylish destination for fine country gifts, has decided to add his considerable talents as an event planner and floral designer to his shop. Now local residents will have the opportunity to enjoy Paul's fabulous, upscale creations and event expertise right here in Cutchogue.

Paul's career took off in Manhattan back in 1975 when he began decorating Saint Thomas Church Fifth Avenue for all holidays and special Sundays. After doing the flowers for Mariel Hemingway's wedding there in 1985, Paul was recommended by costume designer Julie Weiss to design a wedding for actress Kate Burton. Mike Nichols attended that wedding and, as he walked into the church, was immediately inspired to shoot the opening scene of Heartburn (starring Jack Nicholson and Meryl Streep) there. Mr. Nichols asked his staff to contact the florist and arrange to recreate Ms. Burton's flowers on a larger scale for the film.

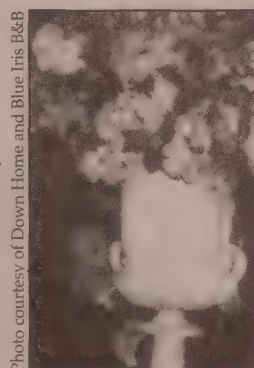

As they say in show biz, a star was born. Paul has since created flower designs for over seventy movies, including Sleepless in Seattle, You've Got Mail, Do The Right Thing, Malcolm X, Kate & Leopold, Mona Lisa Smile, and most recently Will Smith's Hitch. His work has also appeared in Country Living, New York Magazine, Town & Country and the current issue (May) of Coastal Living.

Last weekend, Paul and his staff at Down Home hosted an open house featuring many of his lovely wedding arrangements, though his services are not limited to flowers alone.

"I tell my brides that, if possible, I would like to meet with them twice. For the first meeting, which is very important, I ask them to bring photos from books and magazines of everything they like. I also expect them to do some homework. During the second meeting I interpret what they have brought with them to create something uniquely theirs. This is their wedding we're planning, not mine!"

Some of Paul's wedding tips include: skip corsages for mothers and provide simple hand-held clusters for nervous hands; bring fabrics if possible to the second meeting when choosing a floral color scheme; set the tone at the entrance to a house of worship with flowers to make a grand first impression; don't forget about decorating the table the wedding cake will sit on.

Down Home plans more of these open houses for the spring and early summer. They also offer, with a couple days notice, arrangements for dinner parties and other gatherings. Or just order something for your home to welcome yourself when you arrive. (I have flowers delivered every Sunday to our building in Manhattan so that when we get back to the city in the evening they are there to greet us. This is a small luxury with big rewards.)

The shop looks beautiful this season, filled with wonderful hostess gifts, books, soaps and now flower arrangements for the home and special occasions. It is located just east of the intersection of Main Road and Cox Lane in Cutchogue. Stop by or call 734-6565.

Wine Trail Tasting Tips

Spring is here and now that we've all at least started our spring yard work, it's time to put aside our chores and relieve some of that cabin fever we've all been feeling. I'm sure it will come as no surprise that I think there's no better way to enjoy a spring afternoon than a trip to the wineries.

Whether you're new to visiting winery tasting rooms or a seasoned vet, here are a few tips to help you get the most out of your trip.

Choose a Designated Driver. Sure, the samples you'll be drinking are small, usually an ounce or so, but they do add up. Decide who's going to drive before you head to the first winery. Don't assume that "someone will be sober enough to drive" at the end of the day. Nothing ruins a great day at the wineries like a DWI arrest, or worse. If you don't want to designate a driver, hire one of the limo or bus companies to drive you around.

Don't Try to Visit Every Winery. Again, those little wine pours add up. Choose three or four wineries that you'd like to experience and take your time at each one. Wine tasting is about more than just the wine. Rushing because you want to visit every winery on the North Fork in one day takes away from the experience. Don't do it.

Bring a Picnic Lunch. One of the things I enjoy most about a winery afternoon is having a picnic lunch among the vines. Many wineries have beautiful patios or decks where you can spread out and have a great lunch. But, if you're going to drink wine with lunch, make sure it's from the winery where you're eating. In most cases, they'll even lend you glasses. It's rude to drink wine from another winery on someone else's property.

Don't Wear Perfume or Cologne. This might just be a pet peeve of mine, but if I'm tasting a winery's newly released Merlot, I want to be able to smell the berry aromas with subtle hints of cocoa...not the cologne the guy next to me has drowned himself in. You've met that guy. I know you have. Be considerate.

Speak Up and Ask Questions. Once you're belied up to the wine bar, don't just quietly drink what they pour for you. The people pouring the wines are passionate about them and have a lot to offer. Again, a winery visit is about the full experience, not just the wines. And, if you get lucky, they may just pour you something special that isn't on the usual tasting menu. Get to know these people, they'll remember you the next time you visit.

Don't Drink Wines You Don't Like. If you take that first sip of a reserve Chardonnay and it's just too oaky and buttery for your taste, don't finish it. Every tasting bar has a dump bucket for just this reason. It's okay to skip any of the wines on the tasting list too. If you want to just taste a particular varietal or just reds or whites, you can do that.

Bring Friends and Have Fun. I always say that wine is something best enjoyed with friends. Get a group together and have a great time (with a designated driver, of course.) But remember that you aren't the only people out there. Try not to be too loud or annoying. It ruins the atmosphere for everyone else.

Buy a Bottle to Take Home...If There's One You Like. Some people say you absolutely need to buy at least one bottle of wine at each winery. That's ridiculous. Never feel pressured to do so. Of course, if there's a wine you really love, why wouldn't you want to take some home?

Remember, wineries want you to have a great time so that you'll come back again and again, not feel guilty and never return.

North Fork Dining: Dan's Papers Critics' Choices

Bayview Inn & Restaurant. Culinary fireworks from a new sparkler facing Peconic Bay. The historic Bayview has undergone many identity changes since its inception as an 1860's boutique hotel. Owners Bob and Pat Patchell have restored its original spirit, with seven guestrooms and the North Fork's most exciting new dining room. Thomas Lopez creates separate specials menus, complementing his regular card of winners like spinach pasta with chunky lobster, Asian-style breast of duck, and marinated lamb chops in mint demi-glace. Scrumptious desserts and a kid's menu ensure everyone goes home (or upstairs) happy. South Jamesport Ave. and Front Street, South Jamesport. 722-2659. Entrees, $18-$26. (Trueman-Honey, 8/1/03).

The Clubhouse at Indian Island. Along the pretty Peconic River at Indian Island Golf Course, this restaurant offers quality cooking at realistic prices convenient to diners from both forks. New proprietor Russ Moran transformed a drab dining room to one of warmth and comfort with soft lighting and smartly laid tables. His eclectic menu features the gently pan-fried oysters and clams on the half shell, which you'd swear were just plucked from the bay. French onion soup is deep in flavor. L.I. duck in a pepper cherry sauce and calves liver with bacon & onions were tasty and will leave no one hungry. Riverside Drive & Route 105, Riverhead. 727-0788. Entrees, $11.95-$16.95. (Bradbrook, 4/16/04.)

Cooperage Inn. With a beautiful new look emphasizing the cooperage theme, this charmer continues to carry the banner of North Fork cuisine. Chef/owner Jonathan Perkins, along with chefs Laimo and Hegeman, produce inspired appetizers such as rare sesame tuna carpaccio and pan-seared fresh mozzarella, and don't miss the sesame crusted calamari served over field greens with a soy vinaigrette. Steaks are steakhouse worthy, and the rigatoni ala vodka continues to dazzle. Fish here is always pristine and cooked with a light hand. Entrees $15.50-$30. 2218 Sound Ave. Baiting Hollow. 727-8994. (Simm, 1/10/03).

Desmond's Pub & Restaurant at the Inn at East Wind. The North Fork's new destination hotel hosts an elegant and restful dining room serving excellent a la carte dishes and classic pub fare. Executive chef Richard Laurelli's daily specials are consistent standouts, as evidenced by his chilled vegetable soup with lobster meat, as well as the Andalusia-style beef and chicken tapas. Pub favorites like crisply battered cod and chips hit the mark and familiar entrees like grilled lamb chops are perfectly prepared. The wine list is sensibly priced, though short on local vintages. Blueberry creme brulee was an inventive and winning update on a classic dessert. Entrees, $16-$26. 5720 Rt. 25A, Wading River. 929-3500. (Bradbrook, 8/29/03).

La Plage. A glowing beacon along the Sound coast for sophisticated diners. The stellar reputation of chef / proprietor Wayne Wadington derives from cutting-edge combinations of difficult-to-secure ingredients. His creations fly off the menu as quickly as off the plate, but if you have the chance try the lightly seared scallops with blue crab mille feuille in a kaffir lime / sweet pea sauce or yellow fin tuna paired with chorizo sausage and butternut squash. Desserts range from decadent (chocolate cake with an espresso mousse) to delicate (Tahitian vanilla crême brulee.). All are mind boggling. Top wine list, too. Entrees $22-33. 131 Creek Road, Wading River. 744-9200. (Bradbrook, 2/04).

Modern Snack Bar. Home-cooked meals away from home await you at this charming family-run restaurant operating since 1950. Wittmeier brothers' time-honored menu contains dishes too good to go out of style. Delectable sauerbraten is perfectly tender and the stuffed cabbage very good. Duck breast salad, recently introduced, is another winner. Crab cakes and lobster salad are real treats, but the big surprise is the world-class shrimp and crabmeat quiche. Home-baked

Upcoming Event

Ferrari Show At Galluccio Family Winery April 23, Cutchogue

Galluccio Family Wineries will play host to a different sort of vintage when the Cutchogue-based winery acts as the site of the Run Out East (ROE III), an annual gathering of sports, vintage, exotic and classic cars. Scheduled for Saturday, April 23, at 12 noon, ROE III is open to all makes of vintage automobiles with a special emphasis on Ferrari, Alfa Romeo and other fine Italian motorcars.

This is the third year that Galluccio Family Wineries has been chosen as the site of the ROE, said owner Vince Galluccio. The ride to historic Cutchogue is picturesque — perfect for touring — and the winery's Great Lawn is an ideal spot to display the cars. You couldn't ask for a nicer way to spend a spring weekend on the North Fork.

Last year more than 60 sports cars ranging from Ferraris to Vipers dotted the sprawling lawn at the winery. Visitors strolled the grounds, soaking up the sun, enjoying their picnic lunches, sampling wine and admiring the automobiles.

Admission to the ROE area is free for spectators. The rain date for the event is April 24. The cost to enter a car in the ROE and enjoy a barbeque lunch is $35. For more information on entering a car, email. More information on all events at the winery is available by visiting. Located at 24385 Main Road (Rte. 25) in Cutchogue. desserts are splendid and their take-out pie business is brisk. Wines are mostly limited to local vintages. Reservations not needed, but day or night, it's always a crowded house. Entrees, $9-$17. Rt. 25 Aquebogue. 722-3655. (Bradbrook, 10/4/02).

Pepis. Dazzling panoramic views of Peconic Bay and sumptuous Northern Italian cooking combine for a sensuous dining experience. Appetizers include a highly flavorful vegetable antipasto and a fresh tri-color salad of arugula, radicchio, and endive. Penne ala Vodka, often predictable, is anything but here. The penne is served perfectly al dente and the sauce is both smooth and smoky. Also delicious is chicken Sorrentino, with eggplant, prosciutto and fresh mozzarella. Come dessert, do not miss the tiramisu, co-owner Nikolov's specialty, an all-time keeper. Entrees $16-$25. Port of Egypt Marine, Southold. 765-6373. (Bradbrook, 6/8/01).

Red Door. A quintessentially North Fork restaurant: Manhattan-caliber cuisine paired with an ambience of low-key charm. The Mediterranean-influenced American regional menu always offers a panoply of pastas as well as meat and fish dishes. Perhaps their winningest recipe occurred by accident. Ask genial chef/owner Stephen Mazzella for the story behind his remarkable porterhouse pork chop with honey, capers and cayenne. A true instance of luck being the residue of design! Dessert lovers have their vocabulary stretched by such wonders as raspberry crême brulee and Godiva chocolate cake with Tahitian vanilla bean ice cream. Ample wine list. Entrees — $16-$28. 13560 Main Rd., Mattituck. 298-4800. (Trueman-Honey, 12/03).

Scrimshaw. Chef/co-owner Rosa Ross, whose culinary credentials are carved in many a menu from Hong Kong to Italy to Manhattan, brings her latest invention to Greenport. Nestled at the end of Preston's Dock, there are dazzling views of Shelter Island. The slightly crammed dining room is made intimate and warm by sophisticated lighting and subdued music. The menu is full of interesting tastes, starting with excellent duck confit-stuffed spring rolls and hearty fish chowder. Especially good among the eclectic entrees are tamarind lamb shanks with lemon risotto and the supremely comforting seafood in a sweet, tangy kaffir lime coconut broth. Interesting wine list. Preston's Dock (at end of Main Street), Greenport. 477-8882. (Simm, 06/04).

Stonewall's. Haute cuisine in a tranquil setting, at the Woods Course at Cherry Creek in Riverhead. Step into the warm and inviting dining room, however, and your thoughts will happily shift from golf course to main course. Many superb entrees, including the delicate halibut in a mustard-nut crust, are worth savoring long after the meal has concluded. Duck à l'orange on a bed of wild rice is another standout as is the deeply flavorful lobster bisque. Rigatoni with roasted tomatoes, mozzarella, capers and olives is exquisitely al dente. Fine wines and creatively fruity desserts complete a dining experience par excellence. Entrees $15-$27. 967 Reeves Ave., Riverhead. 506-0777. (Bradbrook, 9/12/03).

Tuscan House. Your table is yours for the evening at this elegant, upscale Italian. Authentic, classical dishes bear the deft touch of chef William Oster. His fish is exceptionally fresh and his osso bucco masterly. But his virtuosity lies in the care with which he pairs his 16 pastas and his sublime sauces. The results range from delicate to intense. Pappardelle with a puree of beans dressed with soppressata, fresh chilies, garlic and parmigiano reggiano is typically adventurous and winning. The dessert tray is filled with excellent choices. Well-chosen wines, emphasis on regional Italians. 673 Osborn Ave., Riverhead. 727-2330. (Bradbrook, 9/7/01).

Tweed's. Owner Ed Tuccio parlayed his interests in history, Americana and the bison to create this unique eatery. The décor puts one in mind of an expensive turn-of-the-century men's club, but with a romantic twist. Notable appetizers include Oysters Portland, enveloped in sautéed leeks and crisp bacon, and the Bistro Salad, redolent of blue cheese and roasted beets. Aside from Tweed's excellent specialty of the house, succulent farm-raised bison, also recommended are the Sashimi Sesame Tuna, carb-free vegetable lasagna, and Duck Two Ways. Don't skip dessert: the pastry chef is a graduate of the Cordon Bleu in London.

Entrees $19-26. 17 E. Main St., Riverhead. 208-3151. (Trueman-Honey, 7/04/03).

THE DAN'S PAPERS THEY MADE THE MOVIE HERE FILM FESTIVAL

SNAPPED

Saturday April 16th at 2 p.m. Dan's Papers' They Made The Movies Here Free Film Festival will continue to pack the Ross School Lecture Hall. It is fitting to present an as yet not-widely-distributed-film by a young writer/director, Jesse Feigelman, that was shot entirely in East Hampton. Feigelman passed away at age 31, but we hope to have his parents present to discuss the making of the film. At the time of his death, Feigelman had been preparing another film titled Hotbox. Discussion of moviemaking here on the East End will be of great local interest and, I, your host, Guy de Fraumeni, will fill in some blanks. With me will be Sarah Halsey at the Ross School mammoth console, pressing the buttons that give us ultra moderne picture and sound. She also tweaks the hearty refreshments. We are at 9 Goodfriend Drive off of Route 114. Be informed the film is Rated: Youth. It contains strong language and some nighttime skinny-dipping. (Those youths are skinny, aren't they?)

Snapped, the first and only feature length film by Feigelman, who made award-winning shorts while studying at SUNY Purchase, has, as his legacy, a story of East Hampton kids growing up a little bent out of shape. The most dented is Billy, played with an overdose of moxie by Johnny Zander. This wily young guy is first seen grabbing a L.I. R.R. train east. Then, mid Island, he's working in a diner. Seated at the counter is a crusty white mustached tough. This is the venerable actor Seymour Cassell. (Coincidentally, just days ago, Ben Gazzara spoke of Cassell dating back to the golden Actor's Studio days.) A customer departs, leaving his payment on the counter. Billy, little devil that he is, slips out from the griddle, takes the money and runs. Cassell puts two and two together – runs out. Billy's gone – he's on another train. He opens a satchel and there's a bundle of money. He adds the new little bit to it. Cassell's in his old car, after him.

We cut to a peaceful road. Tara (Gaby Hoffman) is on her bike. She stops when she sees a dog killed on the road. She photographs it and lies next to it, her cheek on the pavement. Cut to Reed's photo shop on Newtown Lane in East Hampton. A handsome young guy, Shane (David Wheir) is one-hour processing the dog photos. The next batch of photos are sexual-erotic. A fellow naked except for a dead bird covering his privates. There's a handsome brunette with a long squash. We must all remember – photos are developed by other humans, not just fast turning machines. The movie Snapped tells its story with that in mind. It's own story of Billy, Tara and Shane unfolds like packets of processed photos. Tara's weird kinda Voodoo ways, Billy's Wild West pistol-packing way of having fun with Shane who gets his kicks taking in what his friends Billy and Tara are doing. There's Tara's collecting weird stuff and floating it out into the bay – afire. Billy holds up Plain and Fancy where Tara is working. He came to take her home, for heaven's sake. Billy leads Shane into housebreaking. Billy and Tara speed home firing off his pistol. Whoa, there's the midnight dip. And, all the while there's the white mustached man chugging his smoking old overheated car – on the heels of Billy.

The One Hour photos will record the fun, the sadness and, eventual tragedy? What if you ran into the woman with the squash at the produce section of the IGA? What if –you can see it all? We'll show you it all.

Guy de Fraumeni's Hollywood In The Hamptons

Film Noir has gotten much blacker since the sticky-inky pages of comic books have smudged and nudged their way into graphic novels and, with a much broader schemer, are smearing the big wide screens with the murky stabs at entertainment. The red bloodletting has reached bucket-full amounts in Sin City, the most current of the graphic novels (you may remember the toady, Road to Perdition that its makers tried to make us accept with reverence). I should correctly title the new entry as Frank Miller's Sin City since the producers and distributors prefer us to give it the full importance, believing that the graphic novel's creator and film writer/director's name is revered the world over. You and I may well ask, "Who in the world is Frank Miller?" I don't know of Miller's reputation. As a matter of fact, you can make mine a Bud.

Sin City is assuredly graphic. Great, great pains (and, I do mean pains) were taken by Mr. Miller and his co-director Robert (El Mariachi to Spy Kids) Rodriguez to adhere to the pulp pages stylistic visual pastiche. It's a true example of style over content. Mr. Rodriguez thought it revered and even gave up his Director's Guild membership to share director credit with the auteur. It gets even denser when you read: "guest direction" by Quentin Tarantino. In-your-face obvious is the debt owed to Quent for Sin City's crunchy pulpiness and for the scripts' structure. However, in content, it is a throwback to prehistoric caveman concepts like Mickey Spillane's Mike Hammer and the horror comics of William Gaines. And, a horror it is with its too-numerous-to-take-in cast and the too-numerous-to-accept pieces that the cast members go to for our entertainment.

Like Tarantino's Pulp Fiction, Sin City is made up of separate tales. In this case, there are three stories put together like a sandwich. The second tale is the meatiest and it is, unfortunately, stifled top and bottom by two slabs of tasteless, mindless cartoons with stilted copycat dialogue that has Raymond Chandler tossing in his own sin-ridden grave. Pulp dialogue used to be referred to as hard-boiled. Generations later it is just coddled sounding.

The first story features Bruce Willis as a tough detective with a weak heart who deals with a sex pervert, Nick Stahl, who is as vile as can be. We're talkin' tied up little girls, like 11-year-old Makenzie Vega, who grows up to be an exotic dancer with a lot of belly action. Jessica Alba is the woman with the undulating frontage. Millers' Sin City (Actually, Basin City. Gee these guys are so clever) is populated by women of the lowest repute and the highest bosoms. Their professions don't rise above the gutter. But wait! One woman is a parole officer. In Sin City, her attire consists of thong undies and high-heeled shoes. I forgot to look for a badge. The second tale has Mickey Rourke, in full body make-up. He's under there somewhere. He, like Bruce, avenges wronged women and likes a good violent day more than anything. So much so, he's plastered with so many band-aids he looks like patchwork. It's a gory business men do in that slop basin of a town, as stylish as it is. I'm not sure I can write much on the third tale since, by the end of it, there isn't much left of Benico Del Toro, as a bad cop gone to bits and pieces, slowly. Clive Owen is in the mix of mince-meat and Elijah Wood is a serial killer who eats up that stuff – literally.

Oh hum. All in a day's work. Reviewing movies is a dirty job but someone has to do it. Sin City reminds me – there are possibly worse jobs.

Guy Jean de Fraumeni is the producer / writer / director of award-winning European and American feature films. He has been a judge at major film and TV award competitions, including the Oscars, the Emmys and various film festivals. He is assisted by Sarah Halsey.

Entertainment In The Hamptons

theatre review: doubt...by gordin & christiano

No doubt about it, John Patrick Shanley's Doubt is simply the finest new play on Broadway this season. The critically acclaimed production that appeared earlier this season at The Manhattan Theatre Club has transferred to Broadway and is clearly a reason to celebrate. The absorbing play is an inspiring reminder that beautifully crafted drama performed by skilled actors can be just as exciting as any of the glitzy and often mindless musicals which have become the norm of recent years. Moreover, the play gives hope to all the original thinkers that playwrights are creating stimulating new works. Let's hope it is only the tip of the iceberg.

John Patrick Shanley won an Oscar in 1987 for the delightful Moonstruck, but none of his plays has ever appeared on Broadway before. Serious drama on Broadway has become a risky venture and somewhat of an endangered species. Well now, Mr. Shanley's riveting Doubt, a taut four-character study, which examines revelations about child molestations in the Catholic Church, is the proud recipient of the 2005 Pulitzer Prize for Drama. The playwright has his own experiences as a Catholic schoolboy to draw upon and the background gives the story an authenticity that is at once apparent. Further, Shanley presents his characters with a steadfast compassion that is non-judgmental while constructing a compelling drama with fascinating confrontations.

Set in 1964 at St. Nicholas Church School, in the Bronx, where the headmistress Sister Aloysius (Cherry Jones) suspects one of her teachers, a new priest, Father Flynn (Brian F. O'Bryne), may be molesting one of the boys. She enlists the aid of a young nun, Sister James (Heather Goldenhersh), in smoking him out. To make the situation all the more delicate, the boy is the first African-American student in the school's history and is probably a homosexual. He has recently been transferred from a public school, where he was a target for bullies. His mother is more concerned about her child's future and getting him through this school year than the possibility that the priest may be taking advantage of him.

Sister Aloysius is an extraordinary character, a truly heroic nun, who instinctively believes the priest is guilty and is driven by uncompromising conviction to get to the bottom of the situation. She is an archetype for which there is no model, a nun strong enough to challenge the male dominated church. A nun politically savvy enough to realize any accusations she makes will put her against the all male hierarchy of the church that would just as soon remove her from her position rather than investigate her concerns. She is a testament to conviction over indecisiveness. It is unlikely that such a nun has ever existed, but what if?

Cherry Jones is remarkable, giving a wonderfully nuanced portrayal that is monumental. There is not a wasted gesture or untrue moment. She is fully invested in the life of the character, captivating us and drawing into the evening's unfolding events. We are with her as she struggles to navigate the difficult journey to uncovering the truth.

As Father Flynn, Brian F. O'Bryne is equally masterful, creating a fully realized character that appears to be an Irish charmer and a perfect adversary. We first meet him at the top of the play delivering a sermon on doubt. He appears to be a priest of high morals, who is just one of the boys, but displays more disturbing aspects in his confrontations with Sister Aloysius.

Adriane Lenox, as the boy's mother, and Heather Goldenhersh, as the young nun, are both outstanding in their respective roles delivering accomplished support. We were somewhat put off by Ms. Goldenhersh's accent, however, which we felt was overly exaggerated, but did not diminish the depth of her feeling.

Doug Hughes has guided his actors beautifully with a restrained style that suggests the complexity beneath the surface. He has created wonderful images throughout, making effective use of ominous foreboding sound effects, atmospheric lighting, and a set by John Lee Beatty that effectively conveys the mood of a stony cold Catholic School. Given the thorny subject matter we were amazed at how richly humorous and ultimately entertaining the evening was, giving us much to ponder in the process. Doubt is a winner!

Doubt opened at Broadway's Walter Kerr Theatre 219 West 48th Street on March 31. Tickets are available by calling Telecharge at 212-239-6200 or at the box office.

ART COMMENTARY With Marion Wolberg Weiss

"CELEBRATING NATURE" AT ARLENE BUJESE GALLERY

With the warmer weather comes the promise of spring, the idea of renewal and the sense that things are going to get better, especially if it's been a difficult winter. The changing climate also brings the beginning of the Hamptons' exhibition scene; long gone is Memorial Day as the official opening of the art season.

It seems quite appropriate, then, that "Celebrating Nature" at East Hampton's Arlene Bujese Gallery kicks off the season as it also gives validity to spring. While the show may capture the thematic notion of renewal, too, with its subject matter, what the works do not do is reinforce creative renewal, except in a few cases.

Simply said, many artists are showing signature pieces and no matter how good they are, there's a lack of freshness or risk-taking. If that sounds a bit harsh it's because we've come to expect certain things from established artists with outstanding aesthetic sensibilities. Frankly, we may be applying more stringent criteria when judging their works' value by implying that a piece is not "good."

Is this fair or professional, especially since it gets down to what is good and bad? And especially since this critic has tried to avoid subjective opinions concerning likes and dislikes? That's not the purpose of art criticism. Rather, it's to suggest meaning and to determine how that meaning is produced. Yet there comes a time when we must look at a particular show long and hard, sensing that something is missing.

Passion and inspiration were certainly not missing when some artists created their initial pieces years ago. And while most of the exhibit's current pieces have been done recently, the style and subjects look the same as they did years ago. Is that bad? In the context of "renewal," we'd say, "perhaps so."

There are exceptions. Deborah Black's series, "Endlessness," is a continuing development toward abstraction, her themes suggesting a never-ending view of life, undelineated by concrete objects like trees. Ms. Black is now seeing the world through a metaphysical perspective.

Walter Schwab's photographs give grandeur to flowers in a surreal way, detailing what is seen and what is not seen. This idea somehow expands (and renews) his penchant for indigenous people who have now been transformed to other natural forms.

Evelene Wechsler's photograph, "Shadowed Birches," also suggests a creative development in her work where a wooded setting may hide abstract, mythic images.

Alexander Russo's "Nature Rhythm" series is another example of both personal and aesthetic growth. His works shift and change as we look at them, discovering various archetypal images among the abstract shapes: a female figure; a bird; mythic beings who cannot be identified. Call it process or evolution. Most of all, call it renewal.

The current show will be on view until May 2, 2005.

HONORING THE ARTIST: ROBERT RIZZO

It's hard to imagine that this week's cover, "Egypt Lane," was done by anyone who wasn't a long-time resident of East Hampton. But such is the case. Not only is the artist, Roberto Rizzo, not an East Ender, he's not even an American. Yet Mr. Rizzo has captured the neighborhood's ambience so well that we feel as if he must have lived here all his life.

Mr. Rizzo responds to our observation: "I love

East Hampton so much even though I have been living in New York. But I would come here on the weekends ever since I moved to the United States from Italy twenty years ago. It is so peaceful on Egypt Lane, the light and shadows reminding me of the place in Italy where I lived, near Bologna. It's the same intensity of light and color, especially in the summer. If I could live any place in the world, it would be East Hampton." (Mr. Rizzo's dream of living here will come true; he has just purchased a home in East Hampton.)

We wonder how Mr. Rizzo felt coming to New York, leaving his native country when he was young? "America was the center of the contemporary art world," he responds with characteristic enthusiasm and intensity. "I loved the art in Italy, but it's from the past. And you can enjoy the past, how life was, but New York is what's happening now. The art scene here makes you feel you want to give your best. It offers a constant challenge."

"I didn't know anyone when I first came, but I never felt lonely. The people were so friendly. Then I attended The National Academy of Design and met a woman from England, Carolyn, and that has made a real difference."

Living in New York has given Mr. Rizzo a chance to observe people and landmarks alike; he continues to paint such places as Washington Square Park and its arch, appropriate choices since he lives in the neighborhood. And while both his Manhattan and East Hampton scenes lean toward Impressionism, he has recently completed a black and white series of abstractions.

Which is to say that Mr. Rizzo finds innovation important to his growth as an artist. A case in point: he likes to experiment with other art forms as well, including scriptwriting. One such film script involves an artist's chance meeting with a beautiful woman on the subway. He talks about his respect for music, too.

But it's art that has captured Mr. Rizzo's heart and mind. He says, "Each time I paint a picture, I'm learning more and more. I just want to keep painting for the rest of my life."

—Marion Wolberg Weiss

Mr. Rizzo's art can be seen at Hampton Road Gallery in Southampton and starting in June, 2005, at the Kings Road Gallery in London. You may reach him directly at 212-228-7910.

It's Gonna Be a Hot Spring

With spring just beginning, and the peak Hampton season just weeks away, this is the perfect time to load up on all of this season's must-haves. Whether you're looking to hit one of the Hamptons serene beaches, or planning to hit the East End's bustling nightlife, this season is full of exciting choices.

With its bright yellow walls, creative artwork, burst of pinks and prints, Selma and Syd (220 East 60th St, NYC) is often referred to as the ultimate girly girl boutique, and it is certainly deserving of that title. With a clientele that owner Alli Abrahamson describes as ranging "from teens to fabulous grandmothers," you are sure to find some great pieces. Among the sure to be hot-sellers are the My Flat in London pearl necklaces ($100) and bracelets ($62), as well as the Lynn/Linh Pearl-Neck Tees ($79), which have already been spotted on Paris Hilton and Scarlett Johansson.

Greek inspired shoes are another season must-have. Scoop (Newtown Lane, East Hampton), who has long established itself as one of the East End's most trendsetting shops, carries the very coveted Michael Kors Cleo Shoes ($275) in both metallic gold and silver. If you're looking for a less costly alternative, a classic pair of terry Mella flip-flops ($33) is always a popular choice, and available in so many different colors that you are sure to find a pair to match any outfit.

Lulu Guinness, the whimsical British designer, combines both the Greek theme, with pearls and other charms, in her Felicity Gold Sandals ($240), available at Jildor (30 Jobs Lane, Southampton). After picking up your pair of shoes, stop by one of Book Hampton's multiple locations (91 Main Street, Southampton, (631)-324-4939 for other locations), and ask one of the sales people to help you pick out a book from their carefully chosen selection, and you'll be ready for a relaxing day of lounging about.

If, however, you feel that you need to break a sweat before you relax, you will no doubt need some stylish accessories to tote around while you're exercising to fit into one of those itty-bitty bikinis that will no doubt be swarming the East End's beaches. Shitvz Spa ($36) and Beach ($19.50) towels (chosen-couture.com) are great ways to show all your friends that you are a true workout buff, and both would fit perfectly into a Blair Wear hand sprayed Chutzpah Tote ($48).

Pastel-colored eyeshadows (Aegean $16, by Cargo at Sephora.com), especially blues, are great for a clean, sexy look to complement your freshly worked out body. Big bangles are also back this season, and Alexis Bittar offers some innovative wooden ones ($40-$130 at Saks, 1 Hampton Road, Southampton). They're great for adding an ethnic and earthy feel to complement breezy pastel colored makeup.

Hippie-chick has made its way back through the major comeback of Emilio Pucci. The bright, multi-colored prints are great for dressing up or down, and can be found on anything from sunglasses, to towels, to scarves (eluxury.com).

Of course, for those of us on a budget, if we want to be able to afford the likes of a Pucci beach towel, we might have to skip out on some other things. Why not replace air-conditioning with Sharper Image's Deluxe Fantastik, a colorful desktop fan with an ever-changing light show ($19.95, sharperimage.com). It gets the cooling job done, and can even add a nice lighting effect to the room.

The biggest trend this spring might well be the hobo look. Blame it on the Olsen twins, but from faded shoes, to torn jeans, the worn out look has definitely hit it big this season. The Salvation Army (multiple locations, salvationarmyusa.org) has fast become a surprising hot spot for trendsetting shoppers, but if second hand isn't your thing, Abercrombie and Fitch (multiple locations, abercrombie.com) sells Emma Destroyed Boot Leg jeans; they come pre-faded and filled with holes ($79).

From dressing up with pearls, to dressing down with ripped jeans, from working up a sweat, to relaxing with a book, the spring season is one of the nicest times to be in the Hamptons and this year there are some great finds that can make it all the better.

Away At School... By David Lion Rattiner

Last Couple of Weeks

So it has come down to the last two weeks of my college career and I can't figure out if I should be happy or sad. Everybody that I know thinks I am happy about it. Just yesterday I ran into an old professor of mine, who was ear to ear smiling, "Hey Dave, you're graduating this year, right? Oh boy you must be excited!"

Well, yippy skippy zippity doo, I felt like saying back to him. I just nodded and got away from him. Then I got a phone call from my little sister Molly, "Hey Dave! You're graduating soon, aren't you excited?" I hung up the phone on her, then started walking towards the center of campus.

It was an absolutely gorgeous day in Boston and I had two hours to kill before my next class, "Legal and Ethical Issues in Business." I sat lost in thought as I looked at a couple of Frisbee players run around the grass. Young guys and girls were high-fiving one another as others walked by chatting away on their cell phones or listening to their I-Pods. College is pretty cool, I thought to myself, why do they make us leave? Why can't we just stay?

I got to thinking about this idea. What if I just stay here and continue with classes and hang out with my friends? I could just go to class, not sign up for anything and not pay for school. I'd just show up. The classes are so big here anyways I don't think anyone would notice. What difference would it make to anyone?

I then scratched that idea when I realized that if I went ahead and did that I would not be able to afford to live in Boston on my own. Also, after a while I would get old, and all of the young people around me would make me feel out of place. All of my friends are going to graduate anyway, I would be lonely, and I would have to make new friends all over again. That wouldn't be so bad I guess, but then all of my friends that graduate would move on to bigger and better things and I would be stuck living in the past, and I would probably start to feel like I missed out on something. I guess staying in college is a bad idea, unless I go to grad school, but what is the point?

As I sat there and watched the carefree college kids, reality started to set in. I'm no longer a college kid. I'm a young man, about to enter the real world. I got to tell you, it's a scary thought. Everyone graduating acts like they've got it all figured out, but I know that they don't. I'd say about ninety percent of the people I'm graduating with will tell you that they are going to move to New York City and they all have jobs that are apparently the most amazing jobs in the world too. At twenty-two years old they are going to be practically running the company they plan on working for. Yeah, sure buddy, whatever you say.

As the hour drew closer to my next class I started to think about the things that I learned at Northeastern. Did I really learn anything? I guess I learned about the stock market a little, but I think I learned more about the way the world works than anything else. I don't think that I learned this from being in a classroom, however, I think I learned this from meeting so many different people from all over the world that have chosen to study at Northeastern. I learned that no matter where they are from, whether it is Israel, Saudi Arabia, India or Spain, the one sure way to bring people together is to have them play a game of beer pong. I learned that professors like it when you talk to them about your fears and when you sit in the front of the class. I learned that if I eat pizza every single day for a month, I will get sick and gain weight. I learned that everyone in the world is human, even the people that you think are amazing. I learned that this place that they call the real world is a place where you have the choice to allow yourself to be happy or miserable. I learned that if you worry too much about the future, you will get a headache. I learned from a friend that in less than an hour I have an ethics exam to take that I totally forgot to study for. Lastly, I learned that if you don't study for an ethics exam, even if you are an ethical person, you will bomb the test.

When In Manhattan... BY OLIVER PETERSON

The Frick from my Knees

With the scads of museums and galleries in Manhattan, it's hard to choose what to visit. The Chelsea and Soho scenes are good for finding what's new or sometimes what's bad, but it's nice to occasionally look back at the true masters of the past. The Met is huge and beautiful and diverse. The entrance steps are a great place to meet others who share your interest or take in the city sun at the edge of Central Park, but not far away, the Frick Museum is a smaller more manageable collection with no junk to sift through. The structure alone is breathtaking, and the works inside are masterpieces.

Upon his death in 1919, with the purpose of "encouraging and developing the study of fine arts," Henry Clay Frick bequeathed his magnificent New York home and the best of his massive art collection to create a public gallery. The Pittsburgh coke and steel industrialist left sculptures, drawings, prints, furniture, porcelains, rugs, silver and enamels, and 131 paintings that can make an art lover weep. Over the years, trustees and benefactors have helped the museum acquire 47 more paintings. By the end of 1995 the permanent collection held over 1,100 works from the Renaissance to the end of the 19th century. Artists represented reads like an all-star team ranging from Rembrandt to Goya, Bellini, Van Dyck, Van Eyck, El Greco, Degas, Franz Hals, Bruegel, Vermeer, Turner, Whistler, but the collection also houses some of the best examples of Limoges, Chinese porcelains, and 18th century French furniture.

The residence itself is also nothing to ignore, and there is almost no better place to view such paintings. Marble and gold accent the mansion that began its five million-dollar construction in 1913. The house was designed specifically to showcase Frick's paintings and treasures, and from the beginning it seems his intentions were for the public. The museum remains much as it was although improvements have been made when needed. The living hall, however, has remained unchanged since its construction. Frick left another $15 million as an endowment for improvements, maintenance and additions. Mrs. Frick lived there until her death in 1931, when the museum came to fruition.

My personal experiences at the Frick are always enlightening and, dare I say it again – breathtaking. I've mentioned it in this column before, but Saint Francis in the Desert, painted by Bellini in 1480, hanging in all its majesty, literally almost had me on my knees. I'll never know why I was so affected the first time I saw it, but it has remained with me as one of my greatest interactions with a piece of art. It was the first time I understood what it meant to truly be moved by the product of another human being's work. The Rembrandts and Goyas are nothing to brush past either. The might of Goya's The Forge and Rembrandt's use of shadow in his Self Portrait are unforgettable. The entire collection is so good, so absolutely and precisely excellent, that I could rave on about each piece. Better that you just see it for yourself. This collection will inspire, it will change you, it will hook into your memory and stay.

Frick's daughter, Helen Clay Frick, founded The Frick Library in 1920 as a tribute to her late father. The library continues Frick's mission of encouragement for study of the arts by gathering photographs of great art, illuminated manuscripts, and facts relating to the work between the fourth and mid-twentieth century by European and American artists. The collection now holds periodicals, books, archives, and catalogues to comprise one of the planet's leading research centers and comprehensive resources for collectors and patrons.

The Frick Collection, at 1 East 70th Street between Madison and 5th, is open six days a week, 10 a.m. - 6 p.m. and 1 p.m. - 6 p.m. Sundays. They are closed Mondays. Admission is $12, $8 for seniors, and $5 for students. Reach them at 212-288-0700 or go to the website, Frick.org. The Frick Art Reference Library is located at 10 East 71st Street between Madison and Fifth Avenues, and can be reached at 212-288-8700 or by email at reference@frick.org.

What Kind Of Whales Do We See In This Area?

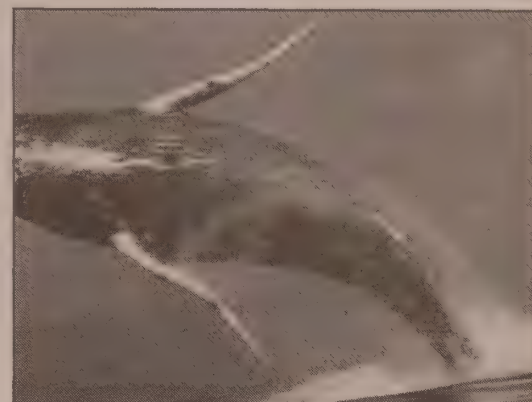

Fin Whale

They're over 80 different species of Cetaceans or whales. They are divided into two classes. Some whales are Baleen whales meaning they are toothless and have special mouths for filtering plankton and krill, from the water. Other whales are Odontocetes, meaning they have teeth to catch their food, usually fish or squid.

Fin Whales are Baleen whales and the largest and most common type of whales that you might see off of Montauk. The fin whale gets its name from a prominent, fin located far back on its body. It is second only in size to the mighty blue whale.

Humpbacks are named for the way they arch their backs when they dive. They too are Baleen whales and are famous for the way they sing to one another.

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

For me, risotto is a dish to dream about. I dream about its magnificent creamy texture. I dream about the different ingredients I would incorporate into the risotto: earthy mushrooms for their deep richness, asparagus or celery for their fresh crisp flavor, or saffron to flavor a simple risotto Milanese.

For the naysayers who feel that risotto requires almost your full attention to achieve its unique creaminess, the solution, of course, is to invite your guests to sip a glass of wine with you as you stir since you all have to be at the table when the risotto is done.

Risotto requires a special kind of rice, such as Arborio or Carnarole. This type of short-grain rice, cultivated in the Po Valley in Northern Italy, is oval in shape and pearly in color. For a properly cooked risotto, hot liquid is stirred into the rice as it cooks so that the rice, when done, has a creamy texture while the individual grains retain their integrity with a slight resistance to the bite. Then I go to the stove and make my dream come true. Not without that glass of wine, of course.

ASPARAGUS RISOTTO

A perfect springtime risotto with seasonal asparagus.

Serves 6

3/4 slender asparagus
5 1/2-6 cups homemade chicken stock or low-sodium canned broth

1/4 teaspoon saffron (optional)
3 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
1 tablespoon unsalted butter
1 medium onion, finely chopped
1 cup white wine
2 cups Arborio rice

Coarse Kosher salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

1/2 cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese plus extra for garnish

1. Trim asparagus and break off woody ends where they naturally bend. Wash and rinse asparagus then cut on the diagonal into pieces about 1 inch long.

2. Put the broth in a saucepan and bring to a bare simmer. Add saffron to broth if using, and stir to dissolve. Keep warm.

3. Heat 2 tablespoons olive oil with 1 tablespoon butter in a heavy-bottom flameproof casserole (such as Le Creuset). Add the asparagus pieces and stir-sauté until they are bright green and slightly tender.

Remove asparagus with slotted spoon and set aside. Add additional tablespoon of oil to pan then add the chopped onion and sautéed over medium heat until the onion is translucent, about 3-4 minutes.

4. Add the rice, stirring to coat the grains for about 1 minute, and season to taste with salt and pepper. Ladle in 1/2 cup of simmering broth stirring constantly, loosening the rice from the sides and bottom of the casserole. When the broth has completely evaporated, add another 1/2 cup. Continue to stir, adding broth, 1/2 cup each time the liquid boils away. Return the asparagus to the rice about 1 minute or so before the risotto is done. There should be no chalkiness in the center of the grains and the rice should be tender, yet creamy and firm to the bite. This could take up to 28 minutes. Add about 1/2 cup Parmesan cheese and stir to mix. Taste to adjust seasoning if necessary and serve immediately on warm plates with extra grated cheese, if desired.

RISOTTO WITH CELERY

Try this fragrant recipe for an in between season dish. The celery is added at different times. The leaves are added at the beginning to give the rice time to absorb the celery flavor. Half way into cooking add the remaining celery for crunch.

Serves 4

5 cups homemade chicken stock or low-sodium broth

1 medium onion, finely chopped
3 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
2 tablespoons unsalted butter

1 cup finely diced celery ribs
2 tablespoons chopped celery leaves from the heart

Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper

1 1/2 cups Italian Arborio or Carnarole rice

1/2 cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese

Extra-virgin olive oil and grated cheese for garnish

1. Put the broth in a saucepan and bring it to a bare simmer. Keep warm.

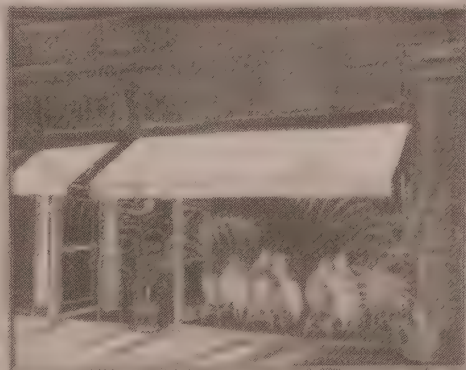

2. In a heavy-bottom flameproof casserole (such as Le Creuset) put in 2 tablespoons of the oil and the butter and heat to melt the butter. Add the chopped onion, bring up the heat to medium-high, and sauté until the onion is pale golden, about 4-5 minutes. Add half the celery and all the chopped celery leaves. Season with salt and pepper to taste and stir to mix. Cook, stirring frequently, for about 3 minutes.

4. Add the rice, stirring into the mixture for about 1 minute. Ladle in 1/2 cup of the simmering broth. Stir constantly with a wooden spoon, loosening the rice from the sides and bottom of the casserole. When the broth has completely evaporated, add another 1/2 cup. Continue to stir, adding broth, 1/2 cup at a time each time the liquid evaporates.

5. After the rice has cooked for 10-12 minutes, add the remaining diced celery. Then continue adding broth and stirring the mixture until the last bit of liquid is boiled away.

The rice is done when it is tender and creamy, yet firm to the bite. This could take up to 25 minutes or so. If the rice is still underdone and you have run out of broth, continue cooking with boiled water – but no liquid should remain in the pan when the rice is done. Serve immediately on warm plates with a drizzle of olive oil and a sprinkle of cheese.

Dining in the Hamptons

Hamptons Restaurant Week Is Fun

Restaurant week in the Hamptons is fun. Dining out on the East End may be the second most popular activity.....well, it might be the most popular thing to do out here. Last week, Wordhampton PR sponsored the Third Annual restaurant week, tempting all of us, year rounders or weekenders, to eat out and eat more than we typically do during a week in April. A few of us at Dan's Papers tried some great spots. Here are the verdicts.

I went to red/bar in Southampton, for the first time. I know it has the reputation of being supercool, chic and delicious, but during the summer, in the traffic, it's far away for a hungry East Hamptoner, and I had just never made it. Guess what? It's supercool, chic and delicious. The red bar is cozy, the energy is electric without being overwhelming, and the dining room glows with candlelight reflected in a multitude of mirrors. After martinis, we were seated in the center of the room, which is great for people watching. I glanced at the prix fixe restaurant week menu and then my eyes drifted to the complete menu, a few inches away. And my decision was made. The salad of endive and watercress, with Stilton and hazelnuts was light, with a variety of textures and crunches, and was enormous. As was my complex and delicious entree, Orange-dusted Head On Gulf Shrimp, served over celeriac risotto with watercress sauce. And my dessert, the warm and rich caramelized banana tart. My friend David loved his gigantic ribeye steak, over creamed spinach with crispy onion rings. We will be back.

Mirko's in Water Mill is intimate dining at its best. The Baby Arugula and Endive salad with goat cheese was zesty. The dressing was perfectly balanced, neither dominating nor falling flat. Not only was the Rigatoni Bolognese the richest and most flavorful I have ever had, the portion was enough to satisfy my intense appetite. But it left just enough room for an apple blackberry tart a la mode - "everything in life should be a la mode." After dinner, Eileen, Mirko's co-owner, gave us the quick tour, showing us the outside summer dining area and even introducing us to Chef Mirko himself.

Friday night we hit Alison on School Street, in Bridgehampton. The restaurant was filled, which is usually a good sign that the quality of food is top notch. And it was. I had the White Bean and Chorizo soup which was light yet hearty, and the Hanger Steak, perfectly prepared and seasoned. Their selection of aperitifs was enough to satisfy any palate. I wasn't expecting the world when it came to dessert too, but I was still upset when the delicious flan arrived and was a mere sliver. Oh, well. All of the selections will be great to try throughout the summer.

On Thursday evening, my friend Bonnie treated me to a lovely belated birthday dinner at Stone Creek Inn in East Quogue. There are two elegant dining rooms with open space and antique white décor that create a crisp, airy feeling. We started with a bowl of delicious lobster bisque. For my entrée I ordered the Penne with broccoli rabe and chicken confit topped with Fontana cheese prepared with garlic and oil. I was truly in heaven. Bonnie chose the pan seared flounder prepared in a beurre blanc sauce with capers served over spinach and leeks on top of a bed of creamy mashed potatoes. For dessert I opted for a lovely apple tart with vanilla ice cream. Amazing.

It was Friday evening and my friend Nicole and I decided to give Robert's in Water Mill a whirl. We arrived about 8:30 p.m. and the restaurant was full so we had a drink at the bar with Todd the bartender. We chatted with owner Robert Durkin for a few minutes.

I began my meal with the crisp Pear, Mountain Gorgonzola & Walnut Salad tossed in a honey-balsamic dressing. Nicole had Tuscan Onion Soup served with Parmesan Bruschetta. For our entrees, we both decided on the Cod Caroccio, delicately baked to a light and flaky perfection, oozing with a medley of flavors. For dessert, we had no problem finishing the warm bread pudding with dried fruit & Crème Anglaise. Robert's Tuscan-style influence is truly unique to the East End. It was the most enjoyable dining experience I've had in a long time. I think we're hooked.

The Garden At Rock Cottage by Lance Brilliantine

Bittersweet Decision for Gardeners

Perhaps you have seen it dotting the periphery of forested areas. Before leaves appear, the orange pods and small, tomato-red berries punctuate the landscape through late fall, winter, and early spring. The colorful berries are a favorite of florists and appear in many floral arrangements. The berries also add contrast to the dull brown of winter landscapes.

Three different plants are called by the name bittersweet: Celastrus orbiculatus – known as Oriental Bittersweet; Celastrus scandens – the American false bittersweet; and Solanum dulcamara – the true bittersweet, often unclassified with the other two. Based on individual experience with the three, gardeners either love or hate the plant.

Oriental Bittersweet (Celastrus orbiculatus) is a beautiful vine. Unfortunately, it produces one of the most invasive and destructive vines known. It is very difficult to eradicate once established. The plant spreads via underground rhizomes and its seeds. So prolific is the plant that it can overtake trees quickly, and can even uproot and topple them from its weight. Native to eastern Asia, the plant was first introduced to the United States in the 1860s. It has spread from New York to North Carolina, and westward to Illinois. The Oriental Bittersweet vine can be recognized by the blunt thorns that are produced all along the vine, and its rounded leaves. The plant's fall foliage is bright yellow and red and beautiful to see. Berries are produced all along the vine.

If you decide to grow this plant it will require every precaution against its spread. While the plant can be trained into a bush with pruning, it must be controlled to prevent infestations elsewhere. The plant must not be grown on valued trees because it quickly smothers them by girdling, preventing photosynthesis and weakening/killing the host. The plant often produces a vine whose stalk is up to 4 inches in diameter. It has spread so successfully that it is beginning to displace its native rival.

Celastrus scandens (American false bittersweet) is a great foliage plant that is neither destructive nor invasive. It is less showy than its rival. The false bittersweet is an indigenous plant with ovate leaves. It lacks the thorns produced by the oriental vine. Berries are produced only at the tips of the vine. It appears naturally in the central and eastern United States, except for Florida.

If you have false bittersweet in your landscape you are fortunate. It is a great fall foliage plant. It has become so rare that it is now a protected species, having been pushed to extinction by the oriental form.

The Oriental Bittersweet is a better competitor than its native rival. Oriental Bittersweet produces fruits that are brighter red, and also produces more of them. As such, birds are more likely to disperse the seeds. The seeds also have a higher rate of germination, and the plant is better at photosynthesizing with an ability to absorb light from a wider range of the spectrum. The result is that the oriental invader has displaced the native vines.

The third type, Solanum dulcamara, is a plant that is distinct from both Oriental Bittersweet and the American false bittersweet. The vine is much smaller than the other two and less woody. Its berries are poisonous, though they have been used as a diuretic in herbal medicine for generations. This bittersweet is a member of the nightshade family of plants. It was first introduced into the United States from Europe.

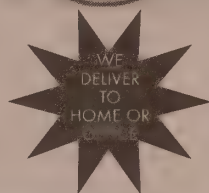

The vine produces bright, dark green pointed leaves and small, purple flowers in May/June. The flowers result in berries changing from green to yellow, orange, and finally red throughout the growing season. Not all of the berries reach the color change at the same time meaning that all three colors appear simultaneously. The vine is much shorter than its rivals and typically appears along fences and at the edges of forested areas. The berries, of course, are poisonous, so this is not a plant for gardens with pets or small children. Like its American rival, the true bittersweet is less prolific than the Oriental Bittersweet. However, it can be propagated by gathering ripened berries and sowing these along fences or at the edges of wooded areas in fall.

Understanding the distinctions between these three vines is important. The wise gardener will avoid destruction of the native plant, control the oriental vine, and use caution with the nightshade variety. Still, this is a worthwhile plant to explore.

Getting in the Swing of Spring

As though a switch was turned on, the heat of the sun has recently made itself known. How wonderful!

The warmth has inspired me during the last two weeks. I have taken walks on the beach for the first time in many weeks. Before the new warmth, my walks on the beach went poorly: the chill of the ocean breeze cut right through my coat, forcing me back to my car quickly. But the last two times, I walked for more than an hour, once with a friend and her dog and the other time with another friend and both our dogs; soaking in the warmth and marveling at the colors and sounds. Others were on the beach, too, many with their dogs. We all shared a sense of relief and rejuvenation. (Alas, as the first walk was impromptu, I did not have my dog, Pete, with me. He seemed to smell the beach on me when I came home, no doubt wondering why I did something so fun without him. I made up for it during the second walk.)

Lately, I have noticed that green sprouts are pushing through the ground in my perennial gardens, invited by the sudden warmth. Does this mean I can plant my vegetable and herb garden already, I wondered? If you want to be quite charitable, you could call me an amateur gardener, but that would be something of an exaggeration. But happily, a recent Garden at Rock Cottage column in this paper was entitled "Staring Seeds for Spring," and last week there was a gardening section (which even included my own small suggestions). I also dusted off my gardening books. Just sitting down and reminding myself about what I need to do has been exciting and relaxing.

So, I went to my local nursery and browsed the seeds, reading the instructions and trying to imagine what herbs and vegetables I could successfully grow and would also want to use this summer. And then I bought $65 worth of seeds, proving that one should never shop for food or seeds when hungry. Last Saturday I gardened, for the first time since I cleaned things up for the winter. I removed winter mulch. I tilled. I planted seeds, mostly outdoors and some in small pots indoors. Soon, I hope to have lots of vegetables and herbs. The feeling that life is coming back to the drab outdoors is intoxicating.

I also made arrangements to have my pool opened shortly – by the time you read this, the work will have begun, and the pool will be ready for use by late April. Friends and family think I am crazy: "Why so soon? It will be too cold to swim!" But by the time the pool is open, the leaves will be back on the trees and my garden will be growing. I just don't want to look at the pool cover anymore. And even if I don't swim yet, I still want to be able to sit outside and marvel at the beauty of the little space I have created for myself. Anyway, Pete does not regard April as too cold to swim. He will be delighted when the pool is open. Perhaps this week I will bring the outdoor furniture up from the basement, where it has collected dust since November.

It is time to wash the car. How many times did you wash your car this winter to get rid of the dirt and grime from the last snowstorm, just to have it snow again two days later? I finally decided to stop wasting my money and just drove around in a dirty car. I realized how bad it had gotten a few weeks ago, when my car was in the shop. They washed it – not super well, but enough for me to remember how nice it was to have a clean car. A friend saw the car that day and said, "Oh, I never realized how nice your car is."

Soon, any day now, I can open the windows in my house and take the car's top down. Won't it be wonderful to smell the fresh air of spring throughout the house and as I drive! The time in spring (and fall) when there is no need for heat or air conditioning means not just lower bills, but also the end of that endlessly recycled, stale, dry air. I can't wait.

Welcome, spring.

Spring Cleaning for Your Body

Last weekend's encouragingly warm weather brought an amazing wave of excitement over me. After a few phone calls, I quickly learned that I wasn't the only one with a warm, waiting-for-summer feeling. There are many things we do in anticipation of the sunny summer ahead. Right now, many of us are taking the first steps in packing up our winter clothes. For those of us that want to look especially hot in the sun, we're already determining our bathing suit options. We've been pent up all winter long, and now we're ready to break out and enjoy the upcoming season. In my search for an effective way to revive and renew, I found something that benefits my mind as well as my body: detox.

On a daily basis, our bodies are exposed to chemicals in our food, bacteria and viruses, and exhaust emissions. Some of us may rely on destructive stimulants like nicotine and caffeine to get us through the day. Pollutants and stimulants contaminate our bodies; causing a lack of energy and memory, dull looking skin, and drowsiness in the mornings. Some people may even suffer from constant colds, or have a generally low level of health.

Cleopatra purified her skin by bathing in milk. Today, the rich and famous take drastic measures in detoxing their bodies, which include fasting and colonics, (colonics tackle the problem from the other end). These procedures are costly, and may be a little questionable to some. What can we do to safely cleanse our bodies on a daily basis, without taking it to the extreme? We can take the mission of detoxing into our own hands.

Since our bodies are made up of 75% water, the 8-glass a day goal is oh-so-important. Water energizes, while flushing the toxins from our bodies. It also contributes to glossy hair and glowing skin. Take it to the tub, and add 15 oz of Epsom salts to warm water. A 20-minute soak will draw impurities from the body, and relieve tired muscles and joints by acting as an anti-inflammatory. You can even go to Gurney's Inn to find an entire pool of the salty stuff.

Teatime does not have to be only once a day. Drink delicious teas (hot or cold) all day long, and choose caffeine-free herbal varieties. Echinacea is an antibacterial herb, and works wonders in treating colds and sore throats. Raspberry tea is ideal for digestion and so is peppermint, which also eases cold symptoms, and nausea. Lemon is the favored fruit for preserving health and, being a diuretic, it's especially essential during detox. Some of us have only known ginger to complement sushi, but in tea, as well as in the raw, ginger aids in digestion. Bedtime calls for chamomile. The powerful fragrance in this tea will help soothe you to sleep.

Eating foods rich in vitamins and minerals fuels the body through its daily functions, and also reduces the risk of some diseases and cancers. The majority of your intake should be fruits and vegetables, along with whole grain (unprocessed) cereals, brown rice, barley, corn, couscous, and a small amount of nuts and seeds. Opt for extra-virgin olive oil whenever possible, and avoid frying food. Stick to baking, boiling, or my must have method of preparing delicious veggies and lean meats, good old grilling.

Stay away from certain foods like red meats and dairy, which are difficult for the body to digest. Steer clear of salts, which cause the kidneys to retain water, and can lead to high blood pressure. Sugar should also be kept to a minimum. With ample fruit intake, you'll get enough of the sweet stuff in its natural form to keep your blood sugar steady. If you haven't guessed it already, junk food should be nearly extinct in your kitchen.

Exercise regularly, and you'll improve circulation and breathing, lower your cholesterol and blood pressure, and reduce the risk of heart disease. You can get your blood pumping simply by spring cleaning, or you may chose to kick it up a notch with cardio activities; increased breathing eliminates toxins through the breath, while sweating removes toxins directly through the skin.

For optimum energy, healthy habits can easily be incorporated into our everyday lives. Fewer colds, less stress, and beautiful skin and hair are just a few of the long-term effects. Along with a healthy body comes a healthy mind, as detoxing can battle depression and allow us to focus more clearly. For some of us, our focus should be only on the summer ahead.

Camouflaging Our Imperfections

Camouflaging skin imperfections can drive people crazy. Whether it's a blemish, scar or some other kind of problem, we want to hide them from the naked eye. What could be a worse scenario than waking up on the morning of your high school prom with a huge pimple? Maybe waking up the morning of your wedding day with one.

It seems inevitable that we all need, at one time or another, to cover-up an imperfection. Luckily for us, today most cosmetic companies have focused on this dilemma and have strived toward developing the natural foundations, concealers and skin-care systems.

A key problem area for me is under my eyes. I

Lancôme, Trish McEvoy, Clinique and Bobbi Brown. However, there are many available at the local pharmacy such as L'Oreal and Maybelline that serve just as well. It all depends on preference, skin type and, of course, budget. But when it comes to your skin, never skimp. This is one area that, as women, we should pay close attention to especially as we get older.

The foundation for great-looking skin is all in the extra care we take. Each day we should use the best cleansers and moisturizers. I prefer to use Dr. Hauschka Milk Cleanser (available at Provisions in Sag Harbor or Second Nature Health Foods in Southampton). As for my moisturizer, I've been using SkinCeuticals Daily Moisture (available at Style Bar in Sag Harbor). I suggest trying a few different products to see what works best for your skin-type.

When applying any make-up, a natural look is the way to go. Like anything in life...less is more. We don't need to break out the putty and sculpting tools. All that is needed is a make-up sponge, a good concealer and foundation. Nobody wants to feel like they're wearing a mask. We have to work with what we have. Remember...beauty is in the eye of the beholder. Being beautiful from within is really what it's all about.

tend to have dark circles on a regular basis. Some say it's due to lack of sleep, and some claim it's hereditary. Perhaps it's a combination of both because my mother has the same problem and I do have irregular sleeping patterns.

There is an assortment of concealers to lighten up the darkness under the eye. It's important to use the right color tone. It's always best to use a lighter shade. When applying the concealer, remember to dab or lightly pat the makeup. Let the first application dry and then reapply for a second time. Never use a powder around the eye area because it creates and highlights fine lines that are normally not visible.

Lip color is yet another problem that women face. It's difficult enough when we can't decide on the right color, but what about when we have to select the correct liner? Outlining lips will do wonders for those who have very light pigment. Believe it or not, a natural tone lip-liner works best. I've seen that dark brown lip-liner and lighter lip-color thing and it doesn't look flattering.

Another challenge when trying to cover-up is not to make your makeup look too thick or heavy. Applying thin layers of foundation or concealer in a patting or dabbing motion will allow for another application. The areas around your nose, hair-line and chin become a problem if makeup is not applied correctly. A smooth look is the optimum appeal and it's all in the blending. Invest in quality sponges and brushes that won't leave streaky marks and an uneven look.

Sephora is one of the best resources out there. They have a wide-range of cosmetic lines and application tools. Although there are no stores locally, you can order on line at www.sephora.com. Locally, Saks in Southampton or White's Pharmacy in East Hampton and Montauk offer a great selection of fine cosmetics.

There are so many cosmetic manufacturers on the market that it's difficult to choose. I've tried many and some of my favorites include Chanel,

Real Estates by Diane Strecker

Real Estate offices continue to sprout like spring flowers out on the East End. With prices being what they are (high) and sales being what they have been (strong), it seems like everyone wants to get in on the action. As a result a number of new real estate offices and satellite offices to existing agencies are spreading out as far as Montauk. The number of new agents and brokers wanting a piece of the pie are increasing as well. We have watched some pretty big numbers pass through the East End brokerages over the last year, where over a billion dollars was exchanged for real estate last year in Southampton Township alone. And the numbers keep rising both in sales and rentals. The sky is the limit when it comes to Hamptons prices because everyone apparently wants to be out here. And now, it seems almost as many want to sell real estate. But like any good thing, it is not as easy as it may seem, seeing that there are only so many properties for sale or rent at the prices that bring these sought after commissions. There are only so many listings in the high millions to go around. Not every office is lucky enough to have a $25 million buyer like Tommy Hilfiger walk through their doors.

There are properties so high in price that the sale can make the broker rich. But, most of the time these commissions are split many ways. A typical commission a few years ago was a flat 6% of the selling price, but no more. These deals are negotiated creatively to what ever way will make them work. Some times a sizable commission, say, to the tune of a million dollars, may be shared by not only more than one agent and broker, but more than one office. There is the broker's cut, then the selling agent or agents' percentage and then a listing broker's portion as well. When a broker has an exclusive listing that they sell themselves, that is where serious money is made. And, there is some serious money yet to be made.

Three Ponds Farm in Bridgehampton is one such property. It has been on the market for quite some time holding out for the right buyer. It will eventually sell; they all do. This one was originally priced at $70 million. Whatever price it ends up bringing, we know it will break records and will make some broker rich or some power broker richer. This grand Hamptons estate on 60 acres is the highest priced piece of real estate currently available on the East End. It actually has three ponds of its own, stocked with Bass, Perch and pickerel, an 18-hole golf course, stables and guesthouses. The mansion itself is 20,000 sq ft, has 8 bedrooms and 12 baths. The property includes a heated pool, pool house tennis court, pro shop, barn, storage silo, and fish house. It has 14 formal gardens. It is listed exclusively with Allan M. Schneider Associates in Bridgehampton.

The Church Estate oceanfront compound in Montauk is another. It too has been on the market for a while, years actually. It is currently listed with Prudential Douglas Elliman in Southampton. This property has no pool, no tennis court and no formal gardens, but stands on its natural beauty alone, waiting for a very wealthy buyer that will pay its $45 million asking price. At one time, it was the highest priced residential real estate on the East End if not the eastern seaboard, but no more as the Burnt Point Estate on Georgica Pond proved when it sold for $45 million just a few short months ago. There is also the White House, in East Hampton, on the pond at $50 million listed with Allan M. Schneider. The sale of any of these properties will make some agent or broker very happy indeed.

DRINK UP

Dear Dan,

Enjoyed your Starbucks article. I thought you might want to know of an interesting Starbucks issue down here in Galveston, TX. The owner of a local bar has been threatened and bullied by Starbucks because he serves a beer named "Starbock" which is a combination of Lone Star and Shiner Bock beers. The story of how this happened is interesting and had no connection to Starbucks but the bottom line here is the story of "corporate vs. the small business owner." They are supposed to go to trial in June and we who support small town businesses are most anxious for the outcome.

Love Dan's Papers! I miss my Long Island so I love to read about it.

Thanks.

NUCLEAR NITPICKING

Dear Dan,

I find your paper both informative and amusing. Not being a "Hamptonite" and just a regular Islander, though from "up island" as they say it's interesting to see the East End point of view.

I was surprised to find your recent article concerning the now defunct Shoreham Nuclear plant to have so many inaccuracies. Especially from someone who touted their involvement during the protest period.

The actual power plant and generation facilities were indeed disassembled after the settlement with the Cuomo administration. The old building was left due to its involved construction and associated cost to raze, however it is truly a "shell" in that there is nothing of significance left inside.

You mention that LIPA was created during the Cuomo settlement with LILCO. This is, in fact not true. LIPA was created in 1998 after LILCO merged with Brooklyn Union Gas to create KeySpan. The ownership of the Electric Transmission and distribution system (T) was transferred to LIPA at that time. LILCO was never "disbanded" as your article states. The results, while complicated, are actually rather academic. It appears that through time you have blurred some of the facts and the timeline surrounding the whole process.

While I agree that Rich Kessel has done a fine job as LIPA chairman I find it difficult to understand the facts behind your statement of LIPA's "refashioning the shattered remains of the old LILCO." LIPA is actually able to keep rates lower than the old LILCO due to their ability to pay little or no taxes on revenues on property. Their being a state run entity allows them this luxury. I'm certain any business on Long Island would welcome this exemption to help their bottom line too.

Maybe my eyesight is failing me but I really don't see the power plant the windmills are supposedly mounted on in the picture in your article. They actually appear to be mounted on towers beyond the fence line behind the stage. The only building I see is a steel storage building, obviously NOT a reactor building.

Oh, one more thing...the plant was never constructed out of bricks. Reinforced poured concrete is more like it.

Good paper, interesting reading. Please just use actual facts when writing articles that are being touted as news.

Regards.

Police Blotter

Teeny Bopper Tilts The Scales of Justice.

The scene? Waldbaum's on Route 58, in Riverhead. The alleged crime? Thievery and assault. The details? According to Riverhead Town Police reports, an 11-year-old was charged with petit larceny and third-degree assault. The 'puny perp' apparently stole $53.41 worth of merchandise from the supermarket and then physically assaulted a store security worker.

* * *

Trading Places? In this East End rendition of Victor, Victoria..... a 33-year-old man decided to slip into a "new" role.....that of his brother in an attempt to fool police. As it turns out, the wool didn't get too far over anyone's eyes. The man was charged with second-degree forgery after being arrested for disorderly conduct late last month.

* * *

Caught Dipping Into A Closed Account.

Writing checks from a closed account netted a Southamptonite an arrest. Sag Harbor Village Police told reporters that Ms. Shopoholic attempted to pay for over $600 in merchandise from Island Surf on Main Street with a phony-balance check.

* * *

A Monstrous Melee. An AK-47. A Funeral. And A Few Arrests.

Apparently complaints over a loud car stereo escalated to a near riot. According to Southampton Town Police reports, a ruckus erupted between a group of area men over the music's volume near a funeral service on Old Quogue Road in Riverside. Several people were arrested, including a 17-year-old, who was later charged with second-degree menacing after witnesses claimed he took an AK-47 from a car and bandied it about in a threatening manner. The weapon was later confiscated from the Riverhead home of the youth's friend.

* * *

Not Very Simpatico. It's a shopping shame! A pair of thieving gal pals was charged with petit larceny and criminal possession of stolen property after they were spied by Sag Harbor Village police taking items from the Simpatico boutique on Main Street. At the time of their arrest, authorities also discovered purloined goods from Andrew and Company, another store in the seaside hamlet.

* * *

All Washed Up? It seems too much knowledge can be a disastrous thing. Case in point, an ex-employee of the Southampton Car Wash stands accused of ripping it off. Apparently, the felonious vixen knew where the key to the safe was kept and was captured on surveillance footage prior to the burglary. Her 15 minutes of fame led to questioning by authorities. After being interviewed by police, she gave a full written confession and DNA sample to detectives. Police told reporters that the woman broke into the building through a garage door and then smashed an interior door to the business office, which is where the safe was kept. The burglary netted her $513 and a charge of burglary in the third degree, a class D felony.

A Last Reprieve! Buoyed By Booze,

Resort Resurfaces. Ah, the drama.....almost as "exciting" as a night at the East Hampton club! While reports of misdoings at the Three Mile Harbor hot spot had authorities wishing the club catered to a less "unruly" crowd, it was an incident last summer, in which an alleged scuffle nearly forced owners to shutter its doors. Sergeant Michael Sarlo explained to reporters that Resort employees neither reported the June altercation to police, nor did they call an ambulance to assist hurt patrons. The incident was referred to the Liquor Authority. According to the club's owner, the liquor license should never have been cancelled, as he had not been notified that a hearing was being held on the matter by the State Liquor Authority. Though a police release stated the club's owner had pleaded "no contest," it turns out the information received from the Liquor Authority may have been incorrect. Long story short, Resort's liquor license has been restored.

STOP FOR TURTLES From late spring through the fall, our indigenous turtles roam their now fragmented environment. As they wander out onto the roadways, they are often struck by speeding and unexpected motorists. These precious turtles are slow moving and can be easily avoided. When frightened, they withdraw into their shells and resemble an elliptical stone in the road. Please drive with care and help a turtle cross the road.
